Paris Claims Many Captives; Berlin Reports Drive Is Halted

By the Associated Press

Paris, Sept. 14.—A strong French drive which forced the Germans into retreat before Saarbrücken and gave the French many prisoners was reported tonight from the Western Front.

French forces were reported pressing the Germans hard, taking prisoners as they penetrated the advance key positions of the Siegfried Line and the rich Saar industrial valley.

The New York Times correspondent in Berlin reported a German army communiqué as saying the French had advanced again into the sector between Hornbach and Saarbrücken, on a "larger scale than hitherto."

The Germans said the advance was repulsed by artillery and mines.

It was apparent the Germans were retreating under cover of a barrage of tons of high explosive shells fired by their heavy batteries on the line of hills south of Saarbrücken.

Motor Columns Lead Push

French motorized columns were in the van of the push. Tonight's official French communiqué telling of the action reported:

"Local advances during the course of which we took prisoners."

An intense German bombardment was reported tonight to have destroyed main highways and railroads along which the French troops were moving to the attack on Saarbrücken. The population of the rich industrial city long since had been moved out.

Today's operations against Saarbrücken were the first in which sufficient prisoners were taken to merit announcement in an official communiqué of the French general staff.

Prisoners were known to have been taken before this, but they had been considered only isolated units captured by raiding parties for the purpose of questioning—the usual preliminary to a major drive.

When big German tanks started pounding French lines late yesterday, French corps commanders reportedly took immediate measures to brace their troops for a possible German attack in force to drive the French back before Saarbrücken.

Nazis Believed Falling Back

After the heavy shelling continued throughout last night and today without a German attack, it apparently became obvious to French commanders that the barrage was to cover a retreat of Nazi troops falling back slowly on the main Siegfried Line positions.

It was reported that despite the rain of projectiles hampering their main lines of communications, French divisions were ordered to advance and occupied German positions as fast as the Nazis pulled out.

Dispatches from Basel in neutral Switzerland where reports were received from both sides of the French-German border said the French had found hand grenades more useful than rifles in the close fighting, since the positions fought for frequently were concrete pillboxes whose defenders exposed only their rifles through the firing slits.

(The Germans were reported to have concentrated armor-piercing anti-tank guns in the area. French tanks also were said to have been used in new stabs at the German lines farther east in the Vosges foothills, northeast of the Bliesch fortresses and in attacks toward the German manufacturing town of Pirmasens. Here the French were said to have scored new advances beyond the village of Vinningen, partly flanking the line of Siegfried defenses to the southeast.

Reports reaching Basel said the first units of British troops had marched into the French Maginot forts amidst the cheers of French troops. It was believed the British had taken positions somewhere between the Moselle and the Rhine.

Morians Start Roads

The pounding from great Krupp mortars blasted the only two high roads running from France to Saarbrücken and dug great gashes into railroad lines which parallel them, said unofficial advisers.

It was on the heights, two miles south and southeast of Saarbrücken, that the main French line apparently was being formed behind advance guards which already had penetrated the suburbs of the city. The oval-shaped hills rise some 300 yards and command the lowlands north to Saarbrücken as well as those stretching back of the French

'We Got Some Hot Stuff,' Says Flight Leader
Of Wilhelmshaven Foray; Tracer Bullets
Nipped Past Wingtips 'Like Blue Sparks'

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 14.—The ministry of information disclosed today what it said was the first eye-witness account of the Royal Air Force bombing of German battleships at Wilhelmshaven, September 5, by the leader of the first flight.

The flight leader's name was not announced. His navigator was a Canadian, whose name was not disclosed.

The account, as given out by the information ministry follows:

"We started for Wilhelmshaven at 4 p. m., September 4," said the leader. "When we left, the afternoon was fine, but as we flew we ran into foul weather with heavy continuous rain. We reached Wilhelmshaven after two hours of flying. As we turned on our last course, five minutes away from Wilhelmshaven, the weather cleared for a few minutes."

"Breaking the light formation, we flew singly into the Schilling Roads."

"We could see a German warship taking on stores from two tenders at her stern. We could even see some washing on a line. Undisturbed by the washing, we proceeded to bomb the battleship."

"Flying at 100 feet above mast height all three aircraft in the flight converged on her. I flew straight ahead. The pilot of the second aircraft came across from one side, and the third crossed from the other side."

"When we flew on top of the battleship we could see the crews running fast to their stations. We dropped our bombs. The second pilot, flying behind, saw two hit. We came 'round, and the ship's

International Law

By William F. Newell

Beligent nations were put on notice by Secretary of State Hull yesterday that this country has not abandoned any of its rights as a neutral under international law, and will take "practical and prudent" steps if any of its rights are violated.

Adoption "for the time being," Hull said, of domestic legislation restricting the relations of Americans with warring powers, do not constitute a modification of the principles of international law.

He added in a statement released at his press conference:

"While belligerents have frequently departed from these principles on one pretext or another, and have endeavored to justify their action on various grounds, the principles still subsist."

Arms Licenses Revoked

Shortly after it was revealed at the State Department that licenses issued for August for export of munitions to countries now at war had been revoked and shipment of all but a minor part of the supplies had been blocked. While the licenses authorized export of about $2,000,000 worth of war supplies, it was estimated that only a small portion of them had moved from this country before President Roosevelt invoked the mandatory arms embargo of the neutrality law.

In another move growing from problems created by Europe's war, President Roosevelt decreed a "military airspace reservation above the Panama Canal and for 3 miles on either side." The order barred all flights above the area unless specifically authorized, prescribed detailed routes to be followed, dis-

Weiss, Smith and 3 Others
Convicted of L. S. U. Fraud

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Sept. 14.—Seymour Weiss, one of the three major heirs to the powerful political machine left by Huey Long, was convicted of mail fraud charges tonight by a Federal jury.

The jurors, after deliberating a little more than two hours, also returned verdicts of "guilty as charged" against Weiss' four co-defendants. All were accused of using the mails in an alleged fraudulent scheme to sell the State university hotel furnishings it already owned.

Those convicted with Weiss, New Orleans and New York hotel executive, were Monte E. Hart, contractor Long favored with State business; Dr. J. M. Smith, former president of Louisiana State University; Louis Leage, suspended official of the Standard Oil Co. of Louisiana, and J. Emory Adams, nephew of Dr. Smith's wife. Judge Wayne G. Borah did not immediately impose sentence.

Counsel for the defendants, visibly surprised, clustered about the judge's stand but withheld comment. Their clients remained in their seats.

Weiss, with former Governor Richard W. Leche and Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans, formed the triumvirate that took over the direction of Louisiana affairs after Long was shot to death at the State capitol in 1935.

Leche, who resigned because of "ill health," is now under indictment on a "hot oil" charge, and Government attorneys said trial of his case was likely to be the next in those being prepared by Federal

Stalin Appears To Be Seeking Pretext for War, Augur Asserts

By Augur.

London, Sept. 15.—Russia mobilizes millions of men. The question may well be asked what is the object of that marshaling of forces along the whole length of border from Finland to the Black Sea. In the south the move is all the more sinister because it coincides with critical moment in the fortunes of the Polish people. The Germans are pushing ruthlessly as if to crush the gallantly resisting Poles against the Russian wall.

In Moscow, the Pravda accuses the Poles of oppressing minorities. It looks as if the Stalin government is preparing to stake its claim when Poland has been disrupted under the terrific blows of the German war machine. Moscow broadcasts complain of infringements of Russian territory by Polish planes. Stalin seems to seek a pretext to pick a quarrel at short notice.

Claim Against Rumania, Too

The Russians have never forgiven the Poles for the defeat of 1920 at the hands of Pilsudski as well as the peace treaty which deprived them of a large slice of territory so called, White Russian. The Russian government resents the fact that several million Ukrainians live under Polish sovereignty, thus creating irreconcilable in the neighborhood of their own Ukrainian provinces which they are doing their utmost to Russify.

Then there is the claim against Rumania for Bessarabia owned by Russia since 1878 and lost after the World War. In the north there are signs that Russia would like to re-establish the heritage of Peter the Great, namely, reconquer the Baltic republics of Estonia and Latvia and bring Finland under its influence as well.

To that formidable list of Russian territorial aspirations one must add the apparent existence in the mind of Stalin of the desire to see unchained in Europe a general war of long duration which Russia would witness at least in its first stages while the great powers weaken each other so that finally all are prostrate at the mercy of the Kremlin.

Unsurpassed in Duplicity

This consideration undoubtedly contributed to the conclusion of the Russo-German pact while the British and French delegations were kept waiting in Foreign Minister Molotov's anteroom. Stalin said that Russia's co-operation with Britain and France would mean swift destruction of Germany while the power of the western democracies would enhance. So he swiftly reversed his whole policy to strengthen Germany's hand re-establishing the balance between opposing parties, thus making more certain the long duration of hostilities.

The Russo-German pact was unsurpassed as an example of duplicity in international relations, but it would be foolish to think it proves any lack of statesmanship.

Hitler in his hatred of Poland, which he determined to destroy at any price, accepted all the demands of Stalin. At one stroke the Russians obtained German consent to satisfaction of the entire list of their territorial claims in Europe. The general terms of those secret protocols deal firstly with recognition of the claim that Finland, Estonia and Latvia belong in the sphere of exclusive Russian influence; secondly, admission of the right for Turkey to dictate the policy of Bulgaria; thirdly and last but not least, the right of Russia to demand a share if Poland is partitioned or if Rumania is obliged to cede a part of her territory to Hungary. It will be seen that Hitler sold out to Stalin completely.

Like A Hovering Vulture

The Russians may have a pact with the Germans even of a military alliance, but they do not trust them an inch. Clearly Stalin could not let a moment pass without demanding immediate satisfaction for his claims which Germany has accepted. He is unwilling to wait for the end of the war, when the situation, as he knows very well, may be entirely different again. The immediate satisfaction of those demands may be the price expected by Stalin for deliveries of raw materials, especially oil, to Germany. It is painful from London to witness the heartless policy of Russia

London, Sept. 14.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain assured the House of Commons and indirectly public opinion of the world today that Great Britain never will resort to an indiscriminate slaughter of civilians from the air even if the Germans carry out their threat to bomb open towns in Poland.

The prime minister's statement was an amplification of Lord Halifax's warning in the Lords yesterday that Great Britain would feel free to retaliate if Germany disregarded the rules of air warfare. It showed the intense anxiety of the British—already expressed in a score of speeches and government pronouncements—not to do anything in this war which might antagonize world opinion or arouse neutral countries.

But Chamberlain also insisted again that Great Britain was determined to win the war and to fight it to the bitter end. The recent Castel Gandolfo, Italy, Sept. 14.—Pope Pius today made a moving appeal to the belligerents to humanize war, urging them to conform to existing international agreements and expressed the hope that civilian populations will be spared the horrors of war and that gas will not be used.

The appeal was contained in an address to the new Belgian ambassador, Adriano Nieuwenhuys, to the Holy See who presented his credentials at Castel Gandolfo.

The part the Holy See will play in the present conflict was clearly outlined by Pope Pius who said that he will remain vigilant so as to seize every opportunity that might offer possibility of negotiations between the warring powers.

Although Pope Pius admitted that hope for peace—which could still have been entertained before the beginning of hostilities—seems barred at present by the "booming of guns," he made it clear that he

More Praise Post for Adding New York Times War Service

Praise of The Washington Post for its addition of the New York Times War News Service in the European situation by the four other leading wire services continued yesterday to pour into The Post's offices.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said: "The Washington Post should be commended and congratulated for adding the New York Times Service to its coverage of war news. Through this reliable and unbiased service, the people of Washington will be able to get a better idea of what is actually going on in Europe."

Edwin C. Lewis, executive secretary of the National Cathedral Foundation and editor of the Cathedral Age, said: "As a regular subscriber to The Washington Post, I congratulate the publisher and his associates in obtaining the New

Warsaw Wholly Encircled, Poles Reported Falling Back to Marshes

By Percy Knauth

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Sept. 14.—German troops advancing from the northeast today completed the encirclement of Warsaw, pushing forward from the Warsaw-Siedlce highway, circling southwest, meeting German troops from the Lodz-Radom sectors south of the capital.

Gdynia, which held out 12 days, surrendered this morning and the Eighteenth Polish division, trapped north of Ostrow Mazowiecka near the Narew River, laid down its arms yesterday afternoon.

Five Polish divisions and two cavalry brigades are still holding out around Kutno in the toughest and longest battle of this war, but they are now cut off completely and cannot be expected to resist much longer.

Thus at the close of the second week of war, Germany has brought to a close the first stage of the campaign. Including the Polish troops trapped at Kutno, between 20 and 25 Polish divisions are estimated either captured or destroyed. An unbroken German line has been established across Poland from Lithuania to Carpatho-Ukraine, with the Polish capital locked tightly within. The Third Reich is thrusting forward spear advances for the final struggle in the wild swampy country east of the Vistula.

Marshes Seal Hope

It is here in the marshes beyond Brest-Litovsk and Lemberg that Poland has the best chance of making a last stand. The speed of Germany's advance, repeated in the east, might give Poland a chance to deal blows in her turn, isolating German troops in the swamps where Polish troops have been trained to fight. However that may be, the initial stage of the German advance beyond the Vistula river has lost none of its speed characterizing the campaign.

The immediate objective of these advances, now well under way, appear to be Brest-Litovsk, Lublin and Lemberg. German advance patrols already are at the threshold of these towns with reinforcements moving up while a further spearhead is swinging westwards from the basic German line.

The spearhead directed immediately at Brest-Litovsk appears to have stopped some twenty miles from the city, while reinforcements from the rear are widening and strengthening its length. New advances are under way from the sector around the Warsaw-Siedlce highway, swinging southwest and west towards Lukow and Siedlce.

Border Fortress Captured

North of Bialystok the Polish fortress of Osowiec was captured today. This is the last of the Polish fortresses along the East Prussian frontier and was taken by East Prussian troops. North of Sandomierz the German troops crossed the Vistula at several points in the first stage of their advance on Lublin. These advances are being made from the Radom sector where yesterday, four Polish divisions surrendered, leaving the Germans a total of 60,000 prisoners; 143 pieces of artillery, and 38 tanks.

East of the San River, the German troops are establishing a front from Tomaszow through Zawarka to Jaworow. The Polish fortress at Przemyśl has been passed both north and east by the German troops in their advance on Lemberg but not yet taken. No further advances in the German push on Lemberg are recorded in the army communiqué.

WAR AND PEACE.

Via diplomatic channels comes a startling tale, ostensibly from neutral military observers with the German army in Poland, about the behavior of Adolf Hitler.

The Fuehrer arrived with one of his trusted servants carefully guarding an unusual, cumbersome package.

After the Fuehrer had gone through his routine of visiting a few wounded soldiers he called a servant, who unpacked the package. It was a painter's easel, with a supply of paints and brushes. He set it up on a hill far, far behind the lines.

"Let the battle continue," said Hitler. "I must paint it."

The staff officers looked at him in amazement. There was no battle going on within 30 miles.

It's a good story, but I don't believe it. For another Hitler story, however, there is excellent "front-line" photographic proof.

The picture shows Hitler crouching behind a screen of foliage, peering at something (presumably a battle) through field glasses.

But, oddly enough, in front of the foliage, out in the open toward the "enemy," stand several German officers, as bored as so many Hollywood extras.

"Little corporal paints a battle."

One of the Capital's most convivial patriots is very depressed about the way war keeps interfering with his comfort.

"First they have a war in Spain and it plays hob with my supply of good sherry," he complains, "and now there's another war and I won't be able to get any German beer."

MEMO TO MARTIN DIES: May be you should investigate and spot the preposterous rumor that Royal Oak, Mich., makes more other American towns its size.

That it harbors Michigan's most famous voice, that rich, foreign-born brogue.

Quite a few of the tourists who gaze up at the flag atop the White House which flies when the President is at home and keeps its neutral argue that there should be another flag there to fly when Mrs. Roosevelt is home, too.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: McNutt's radio voice is giving his backers the heebie-jeebies. . . But they are managing to convince lots of people that his labor record isn't as bad as it's been painted, and that his record as a militia-caller-outer is greatly exaggerated. . . Aristocratic Senator Pete Gerry has special Senate stationery embossed so you can feel the letterhead with your thumb. . . For blind voters, I suppose.

"A flag for Mrs. R. too."

Confidential reports from Germany aver that the Nazis lost 200 airplane pilots this year just practicing before the war began. . . They give a pilot about one-tenth the instruction of an American Army pilot, and after that it's "fly 'em or else."

At that, the success of airplanes against the Poles has been so appalling that some Army experts think the infantry of the future may have to be equipped with something like one light anti-aircraft gun for every squad or two.

Another tale, current in Boston about Herr Herbert Scholz, Hitler's special envoy to New England, is that he tried to rent one of the famous old houses in a neighborhood among "people who really matter." But its owner sets great store by the cherished blue glass windows, decided against renting them, and turned Scholz down as a tenant.

Incidentally, who do you suppose planted those life preservers marked "Bremer" found on a beach near Boston?

Legislation Drafted to Curb Profiteering

Ordered by President. Who May Ask Congress For More Defense Cash

By Felix Cotten.

Attorney General Murphy revealed yesterday that the Justice Department had drafted, at President Roosevelt's request, legislative proposals intended to curb profiteering.

In addition, he said, the department's anti-trust division is making a study of possible collusive profiteering with a view of possible action against offenders under the anti-trust laws.

The proposed profiteering legislation, Murphy said, will be in shape for submission at the extra session of Congress if the President so desires. But he made clear that the President would decide what is to be done with the proposals.

May Ask More Defense Funds

Officials said, meanwhile, that the Administration was considering asking Congress at the special session to appropriate between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 to expand and speed up the $1,800,000,000 national defense program adopted earlier this year.

It will cost at least $100,000,000, officials explained, to finance the 100,000 increase in the National armed forces which Mr. Roosevelt ordered last week. Moreover, extra funds will be required to accelerate some of the munitions, aircraft and other procurement programs which Congress approved for the War Department.

Whether these and other anticipated increases in Government expenditures will cause a rise in the Treasury deficit, however, was a moot question.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed that a study was being made to ascertain whether, as a result of improved business and employment prospects, a substantial increase in tax revenue may be expected, and whether savings may be effected in farm parity payments, relief outlays and some other items.

May Save 220 Million

He said he did not know the answer. But he pointed out that the rise in farm prices might save the Government a substantial part of the $220,000,000 which, it had been estimated, would have to be paid to farmers in parity benefits.

Both he and Budget Director Harold D. Smith, he said, are making broad budget surveys to present to the President.

Murphy agreed with other Administration officials that food prices, on the whole, are not too high. There were some examples of profiteering, he said, immediately after the war broke out, but he did not think "price gouging" was prevalent now.

The proposed profiteering legislation, Murphy explained, has been drawn with a view to avoiding the mistakes made in the 1917 food control act, which was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in 1921.

Would Not Control Prices

The legislation, he intimated, would attempt to fix prices, but would delegate authority to the Chief Executive to control prices within a certain range.

"What we have had in mind," he said, "has been to help economic laws to function in cases where they have been hindered. Our object is to help business recovery, not to thwart it."

The 1917 food control act merely made it unlawful for any person willfully to charge "unreasonable" prices for the necessities of life.

The Supreme Court threw the act out because it said "no ascertainable standard of guilt" was set up. There were no standards by which the courts could determine what prices were reasonable and what were not.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Questions facing the people of the United States as a result of the war in Europe probably exceed in seriousness anything the American public has faced since 1918. To see what the people themselves believe their best interests to be, the American Institute of Public Opinion is conducting a series of Nation-wide surveys. Not available in 1914, the new science of public opinion measurement will provide leaders of public opinion and the people themselves with impartial information.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 14.—Just as in 1914, the British blockade of Germany and the threat of unrestricted submarine warfare by the German navy raise vital questions for the American people regarding the use of the seas by American merchant ships and regarding United States citizens who want to travel abroad.

Unlike 1914, however, the American public is anxious at the outset to restrict American travel on the ships of belligerents and to keep United States vessels away from the blockade zones. Not to be interpreted as an indication of weakness or unwillingness to defend the rights of American citizens, the public's attitude is one more expression of the strong desire in most American minds to stay out of the present European war.

GEORGE GALLUP

American rights under international law, the public's attitude is one more expression of the strong desire in most American minds to stay out of the present European war.

To measure the public's views on these questions at the outset of the war, the American Institute of Public Opinion has just completed a Nation-wide fact-finding survey among men and women voters in every State and in every major occupation group—including wheat farmers and white collar workers, Northerners and Southerners, those who are old enough to remember the last war and those who have just come of age. Interviews were obtained from the various groups in proportion to the way they make up the 45,000,000 voting population.

The results of the survey show:

1. The overwhelming majority of American voters (82 per cent) think Americans should stay out of British, French, Polish or German ships. Though much of the interviewing in the survey had been completed before Americans received word of the sinking of the Athenia, the comments of voters in all parts of the country show they have not forgotten the Lusitania and the way its torpedoing inflamed American sentiment.

2. An equally large majority of voters (84 per cent) say that American ships should not be permitted to carry goods into the zones of war. This would not prevent American ships from carrying cargoes to Latin America, the Orient and other waters, nor would it, of course, prevent American companies from selling goods to European countries provided they carried them aboard in their own ships—the essence of the "cash and carry" plan.

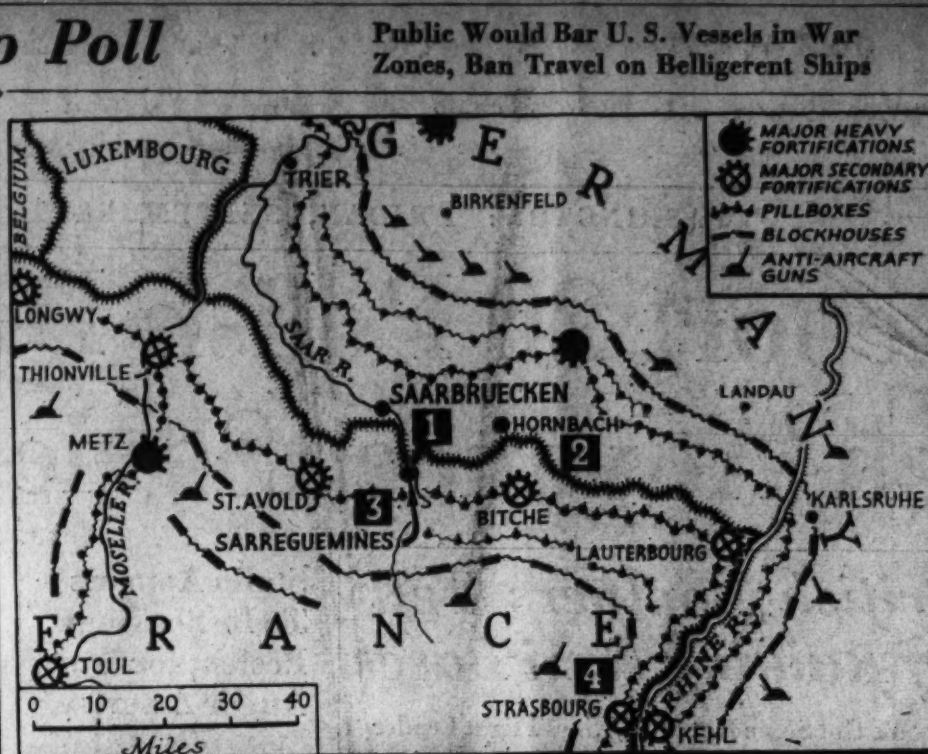

Whether justified or not, American apprehensions on both points clearly reflect the neutrality discussions of the past seven or eight years, and represent a triumph for the framers of neutrality laws since 1935.

The Institute's actual questions were:

1. "Should the United States allow its citizens to travel on ships of countries which are now at war?"

2. "Should our Government allow American ships to carry goods anywhere, or should our ships be kept out of war zones?"

The replies underline the American desire for keeping out of the present war:

A close-up drawing of the north flank of the Western Front where the French advance closing in on three sides of Saarbruecken (1) was reported to have forced the Germans into retreat. Heavy fighting was reported at Hornbach (2). The French drive reportedly had removed Sarreguemines (3) from the range of German heavy artillery. A counter movement by German troops was reported opposite Strasbourg (4).

ican desire for keeping out of the present war:

1. Keep Americans off non-neutral ships? Yes. No. Opposed. 82% 18%
2. Keep American ships out of war zones? Yes. No. Opposed. 84% 16%

Surprisingly positive were most Americans on the two questions. Only 4 per cent said they were undecided or without opinions on the first question, only 5 per cent on the second question.

Under existing neutrality statutes President Roosevelt has already banned travel on the ships of the British and other belligerents. Any move to alter this restriction in the next session of Congress would undoubtedly meet strong public opposition.

On the question of the rights of American ships, however, there may be a bitter argument ahead.

In 1914, American shippers proceeded to deliver goods to both sides and stoutly protested some of the contraband rulings of Great Britain. By 1918, wheat growers, steel makers, shippers and others were insisting on "the freedom of the seas" for American ships, as well as American cargoes.

American relations with Britain became severely strained.

Whether the same strong demands will develop in coming months depends on many factors—what the British and Germans do with neutral shipping, what Congress does with the present neutrality legislation, and so forth.

At the outset, however, in September, 1939, the Institute survey shows that the American public is not demanding "freedom of the seas" fearing that it means "involvement in Europe's war."

The sectional votes on the questions are:

Board Buys Severa Plots For D. C. Parks

57 Acres Acquired
Along Potomac Shore
In Key Bridge Area

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday announced a series of land acquisitions for Washington's park and recreational system.

The purchase were:

Battery Rickets, six acres on a ridge in the southeast section, commanding a board outlook over the city. The site of an old Civil War battery is just west of Fort Stanton Park near Erie street southeast.

Fifty-seven acres along the District shore of the Potomac from Key Bridge to the District line, rendering almost complete the acquisition of land for Palisade Park. The land lies largely between the B. & O. tracks and the river.

40 Acres for Parkway

About 40 acres for Oxen Run Parkway in a strip from Second and Thirteenth streets between Valley and Mississippi avenues southeast. The area, for which the commission has ratified a condemnation award, makes possible a flood control project as well as a neighborhood park.

Four purchases, totaling about 12 acres, to straighten the boundaries of Anacostia Park.

Street frontage necessary to complete Barry Farms Playground on Nichols avenue between Sumner and Howard roads southeast.

The commission also toured areas which it will recommend for purchase next year. The locations were not revealed.

Yesterday's session, the first of the commission meetings in the current fiscal year, will be continued today, when prospective land purchases in Arlington County, Va., and Montgomery County, Md., will be considered, and plans for the National Guard Armory, to be built at the end of East Capitol street, will be discussed with the National Commission on Fine Arts.

Boulevard Zoning

Other topics for discussion, it was announced, will be zoning along the Mount Vernon Memorial Boulevard, the possibility of bringing to Washington the Columbian Fountain, relic of the Chicago Exhibition of 1893; current legislation affecting the commission, re-routing of the Mount Vernon highway around the Gravelly Point Airport, and studies of the proposed Navy Department building.

Tomorrow the commission will meet with Army Engineers to discuss development of the Washington Channel water front, and plans for a comprehensive survey of the city's entire water front area. It also will take up long-range plans for development of units in the city's recreational system.

Virginia-Bound Cars Only to Pass Over Key Bridge

Key Bridge will be open only to Virginia-bound motor traffic beginning Monday, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, announced yesterday.

Capt. Whitehurst refused to accede to a proposal of the Bureau of Public Roads that the bridge be closed to all traffic for two months.

Streetscars will continue to run both ways, subject to interference by trucks pouring concrete. The one-way rule for motor traffic will continue four to six weeks while paving progresses.

Before announcing the plan Capt. Whitehurst consulted John Paul Jones, of the Georgetown Merchants Association, and Fred N. Windridge, of the Rosslyn Business Men's Association, and obtained their approval.

3 Men Injured In Capital Area Traffic Accidents

Three men were injured in traffic accidents yesterday.

George E. Morrison, 39, a Lorton guard, suffered head cuts when his automobile was in collision with another at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue. Anthony L. Lembeck, 23, of 616 Raleigh place southeast, driver of the other car, suffered minor cuts, others were treated at Emergency Hospital.

James Washington, colored, 50, of 517 Mark alley southeast, had both legs broken when he was struck by an automobile on the Baltimore boulevard near Muirkirk Md. He was brought to Casualty Hospital.

A reckless driving charge was placed against Albert L. Brewster, 37, of Dillon, S. C., who was released under $100 bond.

Rumania Reported Recalling Citizens

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP)—The German radio tonight broadcast what purported to be information from Paris that the Rumanian Embassy there ordered all Rumanian residents of Paris, who are of military age, to return to their country at once.

This coincided with German reports from Rumania telling of increased military preparations.

New Yorker Chosen District Welfare Aide

Mrs. Helen Martin
To Fill Job Vacated
By Miss May Hankins

The post of assistant director of the Public Assistance Division was filled yesterday by the District Commissioners with the appointment of Mrs. Helen Martin, New York social worker of 17 years' experience.

Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, who does not take his oath until tomorrow, said Mrs. Martin had the unanimous indorsement of the welfare board and himself. She will fill the vacancy created by the resignation last spring of Miss May O. Hankins, who quit along with Miss Alice M. Hill, director of the division, after an inquiry into District relief administration. Her salary will be $4,600.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin in 1922, Mrs. Martin began her career in Des Moines and later obtained a master's degree from Smith College school of social work. She recently has been with the Manhattanville Play School, New York. She has held 15 jobs in the last 17 years, and is 39 years old.

Today another relief job will be filled when Paul Edwards, formerly of New York, takes oath as District administrator of WPA, succeeding Commissioner George E. Allen.

British Nurse Slain by Nazis

Moraga, Calif., Sept. 14 (AP)—Dr. Henry J. Newsom received word today his sister, Dr. Florence Newsom, a British Red Cross worker, had been killed when a plane in which she was a passenger was shot down while flying over German lines toward Poland.

Dr. Florence was a member of a British volunteer Red Cross unit en route to Poland to help care for wounded Polish soldiers. The war office cable indicated all aboard the plane were killed.

$200,000 Fire Injures 11 at Coney Island

Steeplechase Park
And Boardwalk
Heavily Damaged

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—A $200,000 fire destroyed part of Steeplechase Park and a section of the boardwalk at Coney Island today and resulted in injuries to two civilians and nine of scores of firemen who fought the blaze more than an hour before it was controlled.

A fireworks explosion burned a 15-year-old boy about the face. Its cause undetermined, the fire swept through approximately 300 feet of boardwalk fronting the park, destroyed the flying turns concession, the entrance to the park, a portion of the steeplechase ride, and 16 smaller concessions, including several bath houses.

Because it is Coney's "Mardi Gras" time, the park was closed to the public during the day and was to have been opened at 8 p. m.

The steeplechase is a horse-on-a-rail ride over undulating track that encircles the 15-acre park.

The fire was discovered at 1:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time) and was brought under control at 2:45 p. m., only after five alarms had summoned 13 fire companies and two fireboats. Fire equipment poured 14,000 tons of water a minute into the battle to subdue the blaze.

A police seaplane with a two-way radio directed the firemen's battle, as dense smoke covered that section of Coney. Bathers and civilians gave a hand with hose lines.

The fireworks blast came soon after the fire started. A piece of flying pipe struck a fire lieutenant, lacerating his scalp, and a bystander was overcome by smoke.

Long Island University football players, in uniform, rushed from their practice 3 miles away to aid in policing the crowded area.

Elmer Neagle to Talk

Elmer F. Neagle, national president of the Rainbow Division Veterans, will speak at a meeting of the District chapter at 8 p. m. tomorrow at 1700 L street northwest.

40 and 8 Plans Party

Grande Voiture 174, 40 & 8, of the American Legion, will give a party tomorrow night at the Fortner. Plans will be discussed for the Caucus Club car on the Legion Convention special train to the Chicago convention.

Embargo Nazi Aid, Says Darr, Asking Repeal

District Bar Head Applauded by Central Business Association

Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association, yesterday called for removal of the arms embargo to permit France and England to purchase war supplies on a cash-and-carry basis. His plea was applauded by members of the Central Business Association at their luncheon meeting in the New Colonial Hotel.

Darr predicted that "the Democracies are going to be compelled to rely upon the United States for a great part of their war material replacements if the conflict lasts for any great length of time."

While "every true American fervently hopes and prays that we may stay absolutely out of this conflict," Darr said, the arms embargo is a substantial aid to Germany without guaranteeing that the United States can keep out. He said that a German victory would be "a calamity to Europe," and "a potential source of great danger to us and our security."

"It is my considered judgment that in every possible way, short of our actual participation in war and the extension of large credits we should assist these great democracies (England and France) and lovers of liberty and freedom, if for no other reason than our own future safety and protection," Darr said. "Certainly we should do nothing which would even directly assist Hitler and his mad regime to victory."

British Tell How Army Drew First Blood on the Sea

London, Sept. 14 (P).—A story of how the British army captured the first German ship of the war was disclosed today.

The seizure was announced as made by a battalion of territorial—corresponding to United States National Guardsmen—which was stationed at a London dock.

The ship was unloading cargo when a captain of the territorials heard Prime Minister Chamberlain's words: "We are in a state of war with Germany" over the radio September 3.

With fixed bayonets the territorials boarded the craft and put her captain and crew under guard. A few hours later the ship began sinking and investigation showed her sea-cocks had been opened.

The territorial captain ordered the ship's master on deck and made him tell how to close them. The sinking was stopped, but a short time later she broke out on the ship. It was extinguished and the captain and crew were marched off to jail.

American Club In Paris Cheers Poland's Envoy

Copyright by New York Times.
Paris, Sept. 14.—Polish Ambassador Jules Lukasiewicz was cheered and applauded by the American Club in Paris when he spoke at a luncheon today he proclaimed Poland's resolve to "fight for her independence and for the liberty and honor of humanity until there is complete victory."

Max Shoop, president of the club, said that because the United States is neutral U. S. Ambassador Bullitt, who was present, would not speak. Shoop said, however, that he felt certain he was interpreting the sentiments of the members of the club when he said that they realized the war, now in progress, was a "war of principle against international violence and gangsterism."

John T. Lambert, The Writer, Dies Of Heart Attack

Brookline, Mass., Sept. 14 (U.P).—John T. Lambert, 54, former publisher of the Washington Times and leading political writer for the Hearst newspapers during the Coolidge Administration, died tonight of a heart attack suffered while playing golf.

A native of Portsmouth, N. H., Lambert was executive vice president of Suffolk Downs race track, having resigned as associate editor of the Boston American last year.

Lambert began his newspaper career as a political and editorial writer for the American and became a close friend of Calvin Coolidge, then Governor. When Mr. Coolidge was elected Vice President, Lambert was transferred to Washington as head of the Cosmopolitan News Service and Universal News Service.

He was a member of the Gridiron Club and at one time was president of the White House Correspondents Association.

Lambert is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna Lambert.

U. S. Ships Are Safe, Edison Believes

By John G. Norris

Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison declared yesterday that any belligerent that torpedoes an American ship is taking "a very long chance."

He made the statement when questioned as to the Administration decision not to send warships to convoy American refugees home from Europe. Explaining that officials felt that by painting large American flags on the ships and sending them on regular sea lanes they would be safer than if conveyed, he added:

"If Germany or some other belligerent torpedoes our ships in spite of these precautions, they are taking a very long chance. We feel they will not do it. If it doesn't work, then we'll have to try some other way."

Edison revealed that the Navy had investigated a report that a belligerent airplane had been seen in American waters, and found that "it had a right to be there." He declared the Atlantic coast patrol set up last week to enforce neutrality was "taking very seriously all reports of belligerent planes, ships or submarines being sighted."

"Everybody is going to see lots of things for a while," he added, "but we are going to run them all down."

Earlier, naval officials revealed that 40 of the 110 destroyers laid up at Philadelphia and San Diego are to be placed in commission for use in the Atlantic Coast neutrality patrol. Some of the vessels are in such shape that they can be put into active service within a few weeks, it was said, while others will take nearly six months.

Edison said the Navy did not intend to ask Congress for more money during the special session to meet next week. He said it didn't want to "muddy the waters" in view of the President's desire to limit the session to consideration of neutrality legislation. Steps have already been taken to speed up the ship-building program wherever possible, he declared, with three 8-hour shifts in effect when advisable. As a result, some ships will be completed six months sooner than expected, he added.

The destroyers to be recommissioned include: Gilmer, Ellis, Dupont, Bernandou, Cole, McCormick, Overton, Sturtevant, Bainbridge, Greer, Tarbell, Yarnall, Upshur, Lawrence, Sands, Macleish, King, Humphreys, Biddle, Blakeley, Barney, Breckinridge, Crowninshield, Hale, Buchanan, Aaron Ward, Dallas, Lea, Kane, Brooks, Fox, Hatfield, Evans, Philip, Wicks, Twigg, Gamble, Ramsey, Montgomery and Brees.

U. S. Course Up To Belligerents, Baruch Says

Financier Dines With President; Warns On Profiteering

Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, declared after a conference with President Roosevelt yesterday that whether this country remains out of the European war was a question for the belligerents to decide.

Baruch was the President's luncheon guest, emerging from the White House, he said:

"I want to stay out of the war until the very life of the Nation has been threatened, and it hasn't been threatened as yet."

Warns on Profiteering

"But it is impossible to anticipate acts by nations unteachable enough to engage in war which may kill millions of men, women and children."

He warned that this country should refrain from trying to obtain too high prices for goods sold abroad in the war period.

"You can put this in your pipe and smoke it," he told reporters. "If we get into this war nobody will make the profits he thinks he will. There will be a ceiling on prices. Taxes will be raised and industry will be conscripted as well as man power."

"If anybody thinks they can make a profit out of war, they're crazy."

The tall, white-haired financier, who was chairman of the War Industries Board during the greater part of 1918, declined to say whether the President had asked him to serve on the new National Resources Board.

Urges Preparedness

He said "the first thing this country has got to consider is that its armed forces be adequately prepared. Then you have a voice for war and a voice for peace."

It would have a bad effect on American economy if all trade with belligerents is cut off, he said, since it would "make everybody leery of doing business with a country which, as soon as they got into trouble, would stop trading with them."

Baruch has advocated enactment of the Administration's cash and carry proposal.

Goebbels Drops Out of Sight, Brussels Hears

London, Sept. 15 (Friday) (INS).—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, chief of Adolf Hitler's vast propaganda machine and hitherto Nazism's No. 3 man, has disappeared from public life in Germany, according to Belgian press reports cited in a Reuters dispatch from Brussels today.

The Berlin correspondent of a Belgian news agency reported that there is "increasing comment" in the German capital over the fact. The mystery of his disappearance recalled the rumors of a few months ago to the effect that Goebbels had fallen in disfavor with Hitler because he became involved in an entanglement concerning a Czechoslovakian actress. At that time he was reported to have gone to a hospital suffering from a beating purportedly inflicted on him by friends of the actress' imprisoned husband.

will, however, strive to abbreviate the conflict and if that could not be achieved do his utmost to prevent it from degenerating into a universal conflagration.

There could not be doubt of the depth of his hopes and sorrow as, seated in his throne, he spoke to the ambassador in the presence of his court. What, he said, people have dreamed since the end of the World War had become reality—a "readily incommensurable catastrophe," no one, he continued could estimate the potential horrors inherent in the present conflict nor how far it would spread and the complications it would lead to.

The Pope praised King Leopold's efforts for peace.

Recalling steps in behalf of peace,

the Pope said, up to the last moment before the outbreak of war he had not omitted to do all he could by praying and public exhortations. He reiterated confidential steps to warn leaders of the danger and to induce them to "loyal peaceful negotiations on the bases of justice and love which only are solid and lasting."

While expressing determination to continue his work for peace whenever the opportunity may present itself, the Pope turned his thoughts to the civilian population of the belligerent countries and urged that "the life, property, honor and religious feelings of inhabitants in conquered territories be respected, that prisoners of war will not be treated inhumanely, that they receive the comforts of religion, and that no use be made of poison or asphyxiating gases."

Japan Urges Defense Change For Shanghai

Requests Revision in Joint Plans; U. S. Represented at Talks

By Victor Keen

Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune. Shanghai, Sept. 14.—Japanese naval authorities today requested a revision of the existing international joint defense plans prevailing in the Shanghai International Settlement at a meeting of the defense committee held in the headquarters of the Japanese special naval landing party, Col. Joseph C. Fegan, commander of the Fourth Regiment, United States Marines, represented the United States.

The present joint defense plan, which was adopted in 1931 and modified in 1934, provides for the guarding of the International Settlement against any enemy operating in the surrounding areas. According to its provisions the Shanghai Volunteer Corps and forces of the United States, Japan, Great Britain and Italy each had designated defense sectors.

The Japanese in proposing a revision of the present defense plan maintained that the present scheme did not conform to the existing state of affairs. The Japanese did not offer any concrete changes, but asked the various commanders to consider the proposal for a revision and to hold another meeting at which the Japanese would submit a draft plan of revision as a basis for discussion.

Commanders attending the meeting today agreed to consider the revision proposal, but gave no promise of the adoption of any specified changes.

Polish Port of Gdynia Surrenders, Berlin Says

By International News Service

Berlin, Sept. 14.—German troops tonight occupied the Polish seaport of Gdynia following its surrender, while motorized Nazi contingents moved rapidly through southern Poland toward the Soviet frontier.

The surrender of Gdynia gave Hitler one of his biggest single victories yet achieved since the hostilities opened. It yielded to Germany Poland's only outlet to the sea, on which the Poles spent between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 for fortifications and harbor facilities in the last 15 years.

It gave the German navy an unbroken Baltic coastline all the way from the Kiel Canal to Lithuania for bases of operations.

After the fall of Gdynia, 19 miles northwest of Danzig, a few Polish units continued to resist desperately in a narrow seacoast stretch around Oxhoest, a few miles to the north. But German troops were said to be "mopping up" these units.

Gdynia was formally surrendered by Mayor Skupien to Gen. Eberhardt, commander of the Danzig German troops stationed just north of Zoppot, following a sea, land and air siege of nearly two weeks.

The mayor and a committee of Gdynia's leading citizens followed a Polish courier to Gen. Eberhardt's headquarters and officially signed over the city at 8:10 o'clock Thursday morning (3:10 a. m. E. D. T.). German troops immediately entered the city after the German commander warned the populace that any hostile acts against the conquerors would be punished by courtmartial. The mayor and his committee of 100 were held as hostages.

Gen. Eberhardt reported to Berlin that the costly docks, warehouses, buildings, houses and transport lines of Gdynia were "very little damaged" by the hostilities. It was further alleged that many armed civilians were found and disarmed in the city and that Polish posters were discovered, saying: "We will defend Gdynia to the last breath."

Czechs Honor Masaryk at Embassy Here

Col. Hurban Recalls Founder Foresaw Present Difficulties

The red, white and blue banner of Czechoslovakia rippled over Massachusetts avenue yesterday as an unconquered legion honored the memory of Thomas Garrigue Masaryk.

Founder and first president of the Czechoslovak state, Dr. Masaryk died September 14, 1887. The anniversary brought his country's colors to the legion staff for the first time in 1939, a year that has marked the subjugation of Czechoslovakia and outbreak of a new European war.

The anniversary will be marked even more quietly in Czechoslovakia than in Washington. Col. Vladimir Hurban, Czech Minister to the United States, said yesterday:

Flowers Barred from Grave

"I know there will be many who want to take flowers to the grave at Lany, near Prague," he said, "but I don't believe the Gestapo will let them. The German persecution of our people is unbelievably cruel."

Col. Hurban, a close friend and collaborator of Masaryk, related that the "father of his country," in the last few weeks of his life, saw clearly the dangers hemming in Czechoslovakia.

The 87-year-old statesman spent much of the summer of 1937 in "very careful study of Hitler's book, 'Mein Kampf,'" according to the Minister.

Hurban Quotes Masaryk

Col. Hurban, who visited the retired "President-Liberator" in July, 1937, remembers that Masaryk "understood perfectly the danger in Hitler's doctrine—not so much to Czechoslovakia as to all mankind."

"He saw the inconsistency and immorality in 'Mein Kampf,'" and he often expressed the wish that leaders of every country should read the book," the envoy said.

Col. Hurban's father was a close friend of Masaryk, the Minister recalled. The two men became antagonists over the Russian question—my father being rather conservative and believing that Czarist Russia would liberate the western Slavs—but before my father's death, when he knew I was working with Masaryk in Washington, they were reconciled."

"We Told You," He Says

The Czech diplomat plainly prefers reminiscence of Masaryk to discussion of Europe's present affliction. His reaction to the Europe of 1939 could be summed up in three words: "We told you," Col. Hurban said. He hastily added, however, that "reproaches can accomplish nothing now."

Czech legions now fighting in Poland and in formation on the Western Front cannot draw on large manpower reserves as their famous predecessors of 1914-18, he pointed out, since the men of Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia will not be placed in the German army and given a chance to go over to the Allies.

The legions of the present war are being mobilized rather than recruited, Col. Hurban said. Czechoslovakia, still accorded de jure recognition as an independent government by the United States and other nations, has the power to order its nationals abroad to report for active service, he explained.

Museum Exhibit Here to Honor Schumann-Heink

An exhibit recalling the musical and patriotic career of the late Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, is being shown at the National Museum this month, Smithsonian Institution officials said yesterday.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, a leading opera and concert singer, was active in the cause of Liberty bonds in the World War, and in 1928 she deeded her estate near San Diego to disabled veterans. Of her five sons, one died in action with the German army, and one of four who served with the American Army was killed.

In the exhibit are honors conferred on the singer by leaders of many nations.

20 Polish Divisions Are Reported Destroyed; Warsaw Girdled, Fighting Moves to Swamps

every war and every peace treaty in recent years, again was turned into a bloody battlefield today as Polish troops began slowly to fall back across southeastern Poland under the terrific pressure of a slashing German attack.

German assault units claimed to have cut the main highway between Lublin and Lwow, thus beginning amputation of the Ukraine from the rest of unconquered Poland while German-Slovak motorized columns opened a direct attack on Lwow.

Lublin is about 100 miles southeast of Warsaw and Lwow about 225 in the same direction.

Despite disorganization resulting from repeated terrific bombings, Lwow's Polish defenders claimed to have beaten off a motorized attack. They were reported continuing to "dig in" in emulation of their countrymen's heroic defense of Warsaw, where the first heavy autumnal rains were reported to have fallen.

Much to the joy of the city's defenders who felt the rain would bog down Germany's motorized forces.

Claims Warsaw Is Encircled

The German high command announced in Berlin that a German iron circle had been closed around Warsaw and that Polish divisions north of Lodz, 70 miles southwest of the capital, were fighting stubbornly in defense of the city.

(Dewitt MacKenzie, in his analysis of the fighting, said the Polish main line of defense appeared from incomplete claims to be crumbling in several vital spots at the city's defense of Warsaw was continuing.)

The swift German attack makes the main highway between Warsaw and the Rumanian border the new east battlefield. It again perils picturesque Chelm, Zamosc, Rawarska and Tomaszow, all of which were reduced to ruins and ashes when the Russians, Austrians and Germans fought over the same area in the World War.

The invaders now are in position to attack Lwow, the Ukraine's capital, down the highway from the north and from directly eastward, driving a tank-furrow half way across the remaining free section of Poland.

Information was received here that German motorized columns from Slovakia were accelerating their attacks in a plan to smash through as soon as possible to the Russian border, thus separating Poland from Rumania.

If the Nazis do that the question remains how many Poles would be able to maneuver northward to escape the dragnet and how many would be forced to cross the Rumanian and Russian borders and face internment.

The German drive into the Ukraine, spotlighting the long unsolved problem involving Poland, Soviet Russia, Hungary and Rumania.

While other nationalities emerged from the World War separate states the Ukrainians alone came out divided among different lands. The major portion of the land and population was incorporated within Soviet Russia and others within Poland, Rumania and Czechoslovakia.

Hungary entered the picture when she seized Ruthenia, easternmost part of Czechoslovakia, last March. If and when the Germans complete occupation of the Polish Ukraine more questions will be posed: What will be the ultimate fate of the Ukrainian peoples? Will Soviet Russia reabsorb them as a price of the new Russo-German pact? Will Hungary's Ruthenia become involved? Will Rumania's Ukrainian-populated Bukovina and Bessarabia become entangled in the net again?

The fighting sweeping southeastern Poland may soon provide the answers.

The Ruins of War
Copyright by New York Times
Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP).—The ruins of war stretch out behind the advancing German army, leaving a landscape of smoldering cities and desolate farms, mostly emptied of their former inhabitants with casualties to the civilian population impossible to estimate as yet.

In the general story of destruction, the case of Lodz stands out as the notable exception. This city has become an important military headquarters and has a large German population working in its textile industry.

Hotels still stand and take guests; shops are reopening; the few broken windows and smashed doors are being repaired; the lighted streets are a relief from the darkness of German towns.

Most Towns Damaged
But that Lodz is the fortunate exception was evident during an automobile tour of the battlefield. Almost every other town passed along the road had been badly damaged. Some smaller ones were merely masses of burned and blackened ruins; even their names are no longer legible. In others—Sulewow, Przedborz and many more—the whole business center has been gutted and churches and cathedrals damaged.

In large cities like Piotrkow, where heavy street fighting took place, almost every second house is pockmarked with machine gun bullets and whole blocks have been burned down. Radomsko and Czechow, where the Poles seem to have resisted, met a similar fate. Wooden huts and cottages on the outskirts of most towns are now heaps of ashes from which only the chimneys still rise.

It is impossible to ascertain just what happened to the civilian population of these towns. That, apart from those shot as guerrillas, many must have perished in the general destruction seems certain.

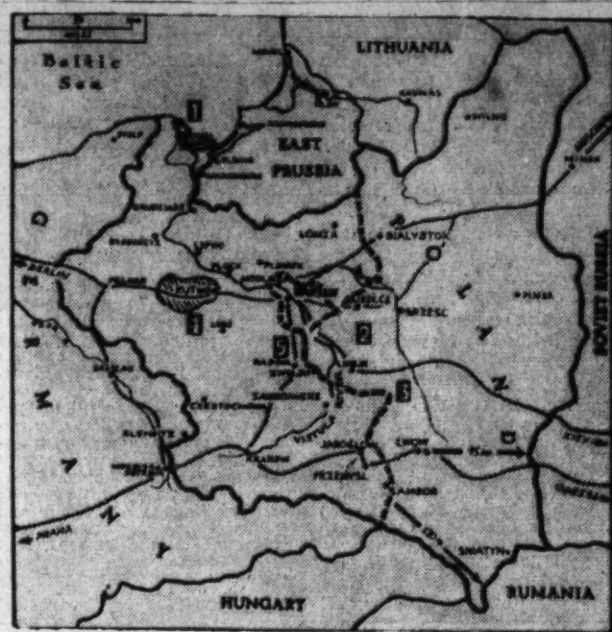

Nazi Losses Reported
London (Friday), Sept. 15 (UPI).—Annihilation of a German infantry regiment in heavy fighting near Lowicz was reported today in an official communiqué by the supreme army command in Warsaw, according to Exchange Telegraph.

Numerous intense bombing raids on Polish towns, railways and highways also were reported in the official announcement, it was stated. The communiqué charged Nazi airmen bombed "open towns indiscriminately, using explosive and incendiary bombs."

Recapture of Kaluszyn after "the fiercest battle" also was claimed.

100,000 Reported Captured
Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP).—German military reports today said more than 100,000 Polish soldiers had been taken prisoner. Those taken in the Radom sector, whose surrender was announced yesterday, numbered 60,000, reports said. Another 60,000 were reported captured in other sectors.

German troops advancing southward east of Warsaw closed the gap between the northern and southern armies. The basic front line now runs from the north to the south through Poland, passing east of Warsaw. Other developments were (1) Germans said Gdynia had surrendered after two-week siege; (2) ring closed around Warsaw, but Poles still held battered capital; (3) Germans reported reaching the Lublin-Lwow road; (4) fighting still heavy in "pocket" west of Warsaw where Polish troops estimated at between 50,000 and 60,000 have been trapped; (5) capture of 60,000 prisoners claimed by Germans north of Radom, where heavy fighting was reported yesterday.

Polish armies had intended to make a last-stand defense. Newspapers said the front had disappeared, with fighting general throughout the nation. The Polish right wing in the north, the newspaper L'Intransigent said, is retreating into the Pripiet Marshes extending eastward to the Russian frontier.

British Asked for Aid
London, Sept. 14 (AP).—Polish Ambassador Raczinski was revealed today to have delivered a note to the British foreign office urging more effective aid to Poland, and aerial help in particular.

30 Reported Killed by Bombs
Budapest, Sept. 14 (AP).—A Polish broadcast from Baranowice tonight declared 30 persons were killed and four big fires were started today in the first air bombing of that city of 30,000 population 200 miles northeast of Warsaw.

Reported Agreed on Buffer State
Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP).—Germany and Soviet Russia were reported tonight in unofficial but well-informed quarters to have agreed to leave a small buffer Polish state between them and not establish a common frontier after German armies have crushed Polish resistance.

It is a curious thought that Russia is preparing to play the part toward Poland which the Poles last year played toward Czechoslovakia. That brings us to consideration of the influence of Polish Foreign Minister Beck upon the fortunes of his country. Until the end he staunchly upheld Pilsudsky's traditional policy of keeping aloof from Moscow. Yet after the rape of Prague last spring the necessity to buy Russian support at any price should have been obvious, but the British, like the French, are convinced the best way to save Poland is to destroy Hitler. Temporary setbacks don't matter if that aim is relentlessly pursued until final victory.

Oppression Laid to Poles
By the Associated Press
Moscow, Sept. 14.—The Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, declared today that the Polish state "began to crumble with the first military setbacks" because of disunity through its "oppression" of national minorities in once-Russian territory.

In an analysis of Poland's "quick military defeat," the newspaper said the "multi-national state" crumbled from within from "deep-rooted weaknesses."

These were pictured as the outgrowth of the "rude and unscrupulous exploitation" of 40 per cent of Poland's people—minority groups including Ukrainians, White Russians and Jews—by "Polish ruling classes."

Meanwhile, a communiqué from the Soviet government charged Polish fliers with "frequent violations" of the Russian-Polish border, where fresh Russian censors augment the frontier guard.

It was announced that two Polish war planes had been forced down east of the border by Soviet airmen and their crews, totaling 13 men, detained.

In its analysis, Pravda said: "In the course of German-Polish hostilities, one cannot cite as facts any serious resistance of Polish troops to the advance of the German army, or any partial Polish success in any direction of operations."

"All reports of the situation in Poland show that disorganization of the entire Polish state machine is constantly growing."

Asserting that Poland's eastern minorities had been "doomed to cultural degradation," and that they represented a people "not knit together by ties of friendship and equality," Pravda added:

"One finds it difficult to explain such a quick defeat only by superiority of German military technique and military organization and by lack of effective assistance to Poland on the part of Great Britain and France."

A "multi-national" State in which minorities are not, taken care of, Pravda said, "cannot constitute a strong military force. This is the root of weakness of the Polish State, and the inner cause of its military defeat."

Partisanship Aim Denied
By the United Press
London, Sept. 14.—Soviet spokesmen today said the Pravda editorial was "purely educational" for the Russian masses and was designed to reassure the public that the rapid breakup of Polish resistance was not due to German invincibility.

These spokesmen denied that Russia has any intention of participating in a partitioning of Poland, but this denial failed to quell speculation and uneasiness in the circles where the possibility of a Soviet attack on Poland was being discussed.

Soviet quarters said the fact that Pravda's editorial refrained from any reference to Poland's conquest of White Russian and Ukrainian territory in 1920 would appear to dispose of the allegations that Russia has designs on Polish soil.

However, foreign diplomats in London remained unsatisfied with the Soviet explanation.

The impression was widespread that if Poland's collapse becomes more complete, Russia may step in. This apprehension was increased by Moscow's publication of an accusation that Polish planes had infringed upon Soviet neutrality and disclosure in Berlin that Soviet-German military talks have been under way for several days on questions connected with the German conquests in Poland.

Russia's military preparations are causing the British and French governments anxiety because of the mystery regarding Josef Stalin's intentions. Berlin also is apprehensive despite the fact that he has concluded a pact of nonaggression with Germany.

Reports from Moscow indicate that Russia is mobilizing on a full wartime basis, and it is estimated here that at least 4,000,000 troops of the Red army are under arms.

The German government is reported to be surprised at the extent of Russian mobilization, particularly as regards troop dispositions, and this may explain the military talks reported from Berlin.

Russia is massing men not alone on the Polish frontier but along Russia's entire frontier from Finland to Rumania.

Military men speculate whether Russia is disquieted at the imminent prospect that German forces, already within about 100 miles of her border in the vicinity of Lwow (Lemberg), may reach the Russian frontier at the southeast corner of Poland.

Fleeing in the path of German troops driving toward the Russian frontier, President Moscicki and his cabinet arrived at Zaleszczyki in the which is ready to betray—for benefit—even the Marxist doctrine which provided her immediate interests. It is like watching a vulture which hovers seeing in agony some animal and then skips nearer intent upon gorging itself when death occurs.

Part of the agreement between Russia and Germany concerns recognition by the latter of Bulgaria as being in the sphere of Turkey's influence. Stalin does not desire to permit Hitler to approach the Black Sea. Therefore a strong Turkey is in his interests. Indeed what better proof is needed of the Machiavellian nature of Russia's policy than the fact that Moscow encouraged Ankara to remain loyal to the British alliance.

It is fairly certain that the Russo-German pact contains a secret annex permitting Russia to abstain from helping Germany if the latter is involved in a conflict with Turkey. Turkey probably accepted the obligation not to permit her alliance with Britain and France to interfere with old established Russo-Turkish friendship.

It is a curious thought that Russia is preparing to play the part toward Poland which the Poles last year played toward Czechoslovakia. That brings us to consideration of the influence of Polish Foreign Minister Beck upon the fortunes of his country. Czechs Honor Masaryk at Embassy Here

Col. Hurban Recalls Founder Foresaw Present Difficulties

The red, white and blue banner of Czechoslovakia rippled over Massachusetts avenue yesterday as an unconquered legion honored the memory of Thomas Garrigue Masaryk.

Founder and first president of the Czechoslovak state, Dr. Masaryk died September 14, 1937. The anniversary brought his country's colors to the legion staff for the first time in 1939, a year that has marked the subjugation of Czechoslovakia and outbreak of a new European war.

The anniversary will be marked even more quietly in Czechoslovakia than in Washington. Col. Vladimir Hurban, Czech Minister to the United States, said yesterday.

Flowers Barred from Grave

"I know there will be many who want to take flowers to the grave at Lany, near Prague," he said, "but I don't believe the Gestapo will let them. The German persecution of our people is unbelievably cruel."

Col. Hurban, a close friend and collaborator of Masaryk, related that the "father of his country," in the last few weeks of his life, saw clearly the dangers hemming in Czechoslovakia.

The 87-year-old statesman spent much of the summer of 1937 in "very careful study of Hitler's book, 'Mein Kampf,'" according to the Minister.

Hurban Quotes Masaryk

Col. Hurban, who visited the retired "President-Liberator" in July, 1937, remembers that Masaryk "understood perfectly the danger in Hitler's doctrine—not so much to Czechoslovakia as to all mankind."

"He saw the inconsistency and immorality in 'Mein Kampf,' and he often expressed the wish that leaders of every country should read the book," the envoy said.

Col. Hurban's father was a close friend of Masaryk, the Minister recalled. The two men "became antagonists over the Russian question—my father being rather conservative and believing that Czarist Russia would liberate the western Slavs—but before my father's death, when he knew I was working with Masaryk in Washington, they were reconciled."

"We Told You," He Says

The Czech diplomat plainly prefers reminiscence of Masaryk to discussion of Europe's present affliction. His reaction to the Europe of 1939 could be summed up in three words. "We told you," Col. Hurban said. He hastily added, however, that "reproaches can accomplish nothing now."

Czech legions now fighting in Poland and in formation on the Western Front cannot draw on as large manpower reserves as their famous predecessors of 1914-18, he pointed out, since the men of Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia will not be placed in the German army and given a chance to go over to the Allies.

The legions of the present war are being mobilized rather than recruited, Col. Hurban said. Czechoslovakia, still accorded de jure recognition as an independent government by the United States and other nations, has the power to order its nationals abroad to report for active service, he explained.

Museum Exhibit Here to Honor Schumann-Heink

An exhibit recalling the musical and patriotic career of the late Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, is being shown at the National Museum this month, Smithsonian Institution officials said yesterday.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, a leading opera and concert singer, was active in the sale of Liberty bonds in the World War, and in 1928 she deeded her estate near San Diego to disabled veterans. Of her five sons, one died in action with the German army, and one of four who served with the American Army was killed.

In the exhibit are honors conferred on the singer by leaders of many nations.

every war and every peace treaty in recent years, again was turned into a bloody battlefield today as Polish troops began slowly to fall back across southeastern Poland under the terrific pressure of a slashing German attack.

German assault units claimed to have cut the main highway between Lublin and Lwow, thus beginning amputation of the Ukraine from the rest of unconquered Poland while German-Slovak motorized columns opened a direct attack on Lwow.

Lublin is about 100 miles southeast of Warsaw and Lwow about 225 in the same direction. Despite disorganization resulting from repeated terrific bombings, Lwow Polish defenders claimed to have beaten off a motorized attack. They were reported continuing to "dig in" in emulation of their countrymen's heroic defense of Warsaw, where the first heavy autumnal rains were reported to have fallen.

Claims Warsaw Is Encircled

The German high command announced in Berlin that a German ring circle had been closed around Warsaw and that Polish divisions north of Lodz, 70 miles southwest of the capital, were fighting stubbornly in defense of the city.

(Dewitt MacKenzie, in his analysis of the fighting, said the Polish main line of defense appeared from incomplete claims to be crumbling in several vital spots but that the defense of Warsaw was continuing.)

The swift German attack makes the main highway between Warsaw and the Rumanian border the newest battlefield. It again perils picturesque Cheim, Zamosc, Rawa Ruska and Tomaszow, all of which were reduced to ruins and ashes when the Russians, Austrians and Germans fought over the same area in the World War.

The invaders now are in position to attack Lwow, the Ukraine's capital, down the highway from the north and from directly eastward, driving a tank-turrow half way across the remaining free section of Poland.

Information was received here that German motorized columns from Slovakia were accelerating their attack in a plan to smash through as soon as possible to the Russian border, thus separating Poland from Rumania.

If the Nazis do that the question remains how many Poles would be able to maneuver northward to escape the dragnet and how many would be forced to cross the Rumanian and Russian borders and face internment.

The German drive into the Ukraine spotlights the long unsolved problem involving Poland, Soviet Russia, Hungary and Rumania.

While other nationalities emerged from the World War separate states the Ukrainians alone came out divided among different lands. The major portion of the land and population was incorporated within Soviet Russia and others within Poland, Rumania and Czechoslovakia.

Hungary entered the picture when she seized Ruthenia, easternmost part of Czechoslovakia, last March. If and when the Germans complete occupation of the Polish Ukraine more questions will be posed: What will be the ultimate fate of the Ukrainian peoples? Will Soviet Russia reabsorb them as a price of the new Russo-German pact? Will Hungary's Ruthenia become involved? Will Rumania's Ukrainian-populated Bukovina and Bessarabia become entangled in the net again?

The fighting sweeping southeastern Poland may soon provide the answers.

The Ruins of War

Copied by New York Times. Berlin, Sept. 14.—The ruins of war stretch out behind the advancing German army, leaving a landscape of smoldering cities and desolate farms, mostly emptied of their former inhabitants with casualties to the civilian population impossible to estimate as yet.

In the general story of destruction, the case of Lodz stands out as the notable exception. This city has become an important military headquarters and has a large German population working in its textile industry.

Holes still stand and take guests; shops are reopening; the few broken windows and smashed doors are being repaired; the lighted streets are a relief from the darkness of German towns.

Most Towns Damaged

But that Lodz is the fortunate exception was evident during an automobile tour of the battlefield. Almost every other town passed along the road had been badly damaged. Some smaller ones were merely masses of burned and blackened ruins; even their names are no longer legible. In others—Sulewów, Przedborz and many more—the whole business center has been gutted and churches and cathedrals damaged.

In large cities like Piotrków, where heavy street fighting took place, almost every second house is pockmarked with machine gun bullets and whole blocks have been burned down. Radomsko and Czenstochowa, where the Poles seem to have resisted, met a similar fate. Wooden huts and cottages on the outskirts of most towns are now heaps of ashes from which only the chimneys still rise.

It is impossible to ascertain just what happened to the civilian population of these towns. That, apart from those shot as guerrillas, many must have perished in the general destruction seems certain.

Nazi Losses Reported

London (Friday), Sept. 15 (HNS).—Annihilation of a German infantry regiment in heavy fighting near Lowicz was reported today in an official communique by the supreme army command in Warsaw, according to Exchange Telegraph.

Numerous intense bombing raids on Polish towns, railways and highways also were reported in the official announcement, it was stated. The communique charged Nazi airmen bombed "open towns indiscriminately, using explosive and incendiary bombs."

Recapture of Kaluszyn after "the fiercest battle" also was claimed.

100,000 Reported Captured

Berlin, Sept. 14 (HNS).—German military reports today said more than 100,000 Polish soldiers had been taken prisoner. Those taken in the Radom sector, whose surrender was announced yesterday, numbered 60,000, reports said. Another 60,000 were reported captured in other sectors.

French Admit Polish Losses

Paris, Sept. 14 (HNS).—It was admitted here today that the German army in Poland has gone deep behind the Vistula line, where the German troops advancing southward east of Warsaw closed the gap between the northern and southern armies. The basic front line now runs from the north to the south through Poland, passing east of Warsaw. Other developments were (1) Germans said Gdynia had surrendered after two-week siege; (2) ring closed around Warsaw, but Poles still held battered capital; (3) Germans reported reaching the Lublin-Lwow road; (4) fighting still heavy in "pocket" west of Warsaw where Polish troops estimated at between 50,000 and 60,000 have been trapped; (5) capture of 60,000 prisoners claimed by Germans north of Radom, where heavy fighting was reported yesterday.

Polish armies had intended to make a last-stand defense. Newspapers said the front had disappeared, with fighting general throughout the nation. The Polish right wing in the north, the newspaper 'Intransigent' said, is retreating into the Pripiet Marshes extending eastward to the Russian frontier.

British Asked for Aid

London, Sept. 14 (HNS).—Polish Ambassador Raczkowski was reported today to have delivered a note to the British foreign office urging more effective aid to Poland, and aerial help in particular.

30 Reported Killed by Bombs

Budapest, Sept. 14 (HNS).—A Polish broadcast from Baranowicz to tonight declared 30 persons were killed and four big fires were started today in the first air bombing of that city of 30,000 population 200 miles northeast of Warsaw.

Reported Agreed on Buffer State

Berlin, Sept. 14 (HNS).—Germany and Soviet Russia were reported today to have agreed to leave a small buffer Polish state between them and not establish a common frontier after German armies have crushed Polish resistance.

which is ready to betray—for benefit—even the Marxist doctrine which provided her immediate interests. It is like watching a vulture which hovers seeing in agony some animal and then skips nearer intent upon gorging itself when death occurs.

Part of the agreement between Russia and Germany concerns recognition by the latter of Bulgaria as being in the sphere of Turkey's influence. Stalin does not desire to permit Hitler to approach the Black Sea. Therefore a strong Turkey is in his interests. Indeed what better proof is needed of the Machiavellian nature of Russia's policy than the fact that Moscow encouraged Ankara to remain loyal to the British alliance?

It is fairly certain that the Russo-German pact contains a secret annex permitting Russia to abstain from helping Germany if the latter is involved in a conflict with Turkey. Turkey probably accepted the obligation not to permit her alliance with Britain and France to interfere with old established Russo-Turkish friendship.

It is a curious thought that Russia is preparing to play the part toward Poland which the Poles last year played toward Czechoslovakia. That brings us to consideration of the influence of Polish Foreign Minister Beck upon the fortunes of his country. Until the end he staunchly upheld Pilsudski's traditional policy of keeping aloof from Moscow. Yet after the rape of Prague last spring the necessity to buy Russian support at any price should have been obvious, but the British, like the French, are convinced the best way to save Poland is to destroy Hitler. Temporary setbacks don't matter if that aim is relentlessly pursued until final victory.

Oppression Laid to Poles

By the Associated Press. Moscow, Sept. 14.—The Communist Party newspaper, Pravda, declared today that the Polish state "began to crumble with the first military setbacks" because of disunity through its "oppression" of national minorities in once-Russian territories.

In an analysis of Poland's "quick military defeat," the newspaper said the "multi-national state" crumbled from within from "deep-rooted weaknesses."

These were pictured as the outgrowth of the "rude and unscrupulous exploitation" of 40 per cent of Poland's people—minority groups including Ukrainians, White Russians and Jews—by "Polish ruling classes."

Meanwhile, a communique from the Soviet government charged Polish flirts with "frequent violations" of the Russian-Polish border, where fresh Russian reservists augment the frontier guard.

It was announced that two Polish war planes had been forced down east of the border by Soviet airmen and their crews, totaling 15 men, detained.

In its analysis, Pravda said: "In the course of German-Polish hostilities, one cannot cite as facts any serious resistance of Polish troops to the advance of the German army, or any partial Polish success in any direction of operations."

"All reports of the situation in Poland show that disorganization of the entire Polish state machine is constantly growing."

Asserting that Poland's eastern minorities had been "doomed to cultural degradation," and that they represented a people "not knit together by ties of friendship and equality," Pravda added: "One finds it difficult to explain such a quick defeat only by superiority of German military technique and military organization and by lack of effective assistance to Poland on the part of Great Britain and France."

A "multi-national" State in which minorities are not, taken care of, Pravda said, "cannot constitute a strong military force. This is the root of weakness of the Polish State, and the inner cause of its military defeat."

Partisanship Also Denied

By the United Press. London, Sept. 14.—Soviet spokesmen today said the Pravda editorial was "purely educational" for the Russian masses and was designed to reassure the public that the rapid break of Polish resistance was not due to German invincibility.

These spokesmen denied that Russia has any intention of participating in a partitioning of Poland, but this denial failed to quell speculation and uneasiness in the circles where the possibility of a Soviet attack on Poland was being discussed.

Soviet quarters said the fact that Pravda's editorial refrained from any reference to Poland's conquest of White Russian and Ukrainian territory in 1920 would appear to dispose of the allegations that Russia has designs on Polish soil.

However, foreign diplomats in London remained unsatisfied with the Soviet explanation.

The impression was widespread that if Poland's collapse becomes more complete, Russia may step in. This apprehension was increased by Moscow's publication of an accusation that Polish planes had infringed upon Soviet neutrality and disclosure in Berlin that Soviet-German military talks have been under way for several days on questions connected with the German conquests in Poland.

Russia's military preparations are causing the British and French governments anxiety because of the mystery regarding Josef Stalin's intentions. Berlin also is apprehensive despite the fact that he has concluded a pact of nonaggression with Germany.

Reports from Moscow indicate that Russia is mobilizing on a full wartime basis, and it is estimated here that at least 4,000,000 troops of the Red army are under arms.

The German government is reported to be surprised at the extent of Russian mobilization, particularly as regards troop dispositions, and this may explain the military talks reported from Berlin.

Russia is massing men not alone on the Polish frontier but along Russia's entire frontier from Finland to Rumania.

Military men speculate whether Russia is disquieted at the imminent prospect that German forces, already within about 100 miles of her border in the vicinity of Lwow (Lemberg), may reach the Russian frontier at the southeast corner of Poland.

Polish Capital Moves Again

Cernauti, Rumania, at the Polish frontier, (Friday), Sept. 15 (HNS).—The Polish government today was established in a new emergency capital, Zaleszczyki, only 5 miles north of the Rumanian frontier, after hastily evacuating Kzemieniec, 25 miles east of the Soviet border.

Fleeing in the path of German troops driving toward the Russian frontier, President Mosticki and his cabinet arrived at Zaleszczyki in the midst of a cavalcade of thousands of Polish refugees seeking haven in Rumania.

Rumanian frontier guards were being heavily reinforced this morning to check a possible wild stampede of Polish men, women and children across the border.

American Ambassador Biddle crossed the frontier in the afternoon and visited briefly in Cernauti, after which he returned to his post at Zaleszczyki.

The wife and children of Polish Foreign Minister Beck took refuge in Cernauti. Some minor Polish government officials are reported already to have crossed the border.

Captain Tells How Nazi Sub Sank His Ship

U-Boat's Master Told Him He Didn't Like War Either, He Says

Copyright, 1939, by N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

New York, Sept. 14.—The Holland-American liner Stendam docked at Hoboken from Rotterdam today with 1,641 regular passengers and 37 picked up at sea—the captain and crew of the British freighter Winkler, which was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine last Saturday morning 380 miles off Ireland.

Capt. Thomas Georgeson, the freighter's master, told a news conference given him by a Stendam passenger, but most of his young crew still wore the dungarees, sweaters or sea coats they had on when the German submarine captain ordered them into lifeboats to watch the sinking of their ship, first permitting them one S. O. S. call. After the 5,065-ton Winkler went down, leaving her deck cargo of lumber floating on the sea, the captain and crew waited in the lifeboats for seven hours until the Stendam arrived.

Capt. Georgeson, whose ship was headed from near Vancouver, B. C., to English ports, told his story today.

Shot Fired Over Ship

"Russell Brumpton, a lookout on the bow, sighted the submarine coming out of the water off the starboard beam, about 2 miles off, shortly after 7 o'clock Saturday morning. With a top speed of only 9 knots, it was no use to try to outrun her.

"The submarine hoisted a flag signal but I couldn't read it. Then they fired a shot over us. We knew what they meant and we took to the boats. We didn't have time to get clothing or anything."

Captain Georgeson said the chief mate's lifeboat stood by while his boat pulled over to the submarine and he went aboard.

"I spent about five minutes talking to the captain of the submarine," he went on. "He appeared to be a young man of about twenty-five. He spoke English well and was very courteous. He said he didn't like the war any better than I did.

Gave Them Bread, Cigarettes

"He asked if we had enough bread in our lifeboats, saying he could give us a couple of dozen rolls if we didn't have plenty. I told him we had enough bread along to last till we were picked up and that we expected a Dutch boat soon. He gave us four loaves of bread and a package of cigarettes."

The two lifeboats then drew off a few hundred yards and the torpedo went crashing into the Winkler's starboard side at the boiler room. The submarine went away then.

It was two hours before the Winkler sank but when she started, she went fast, and soon the lifeboats drifted about in a sea of lumber.

The Norwegian-American liner Olofson also arrived in New York from Oslo today with 791 passengers, including 530 Americans, who had an uneventful crossing except for a submarine scare started by some passengers who did not recognize a spouting whale for a spouting bale.

Athena Survivors Home

Newark, N. J., Sept. 14 (AP).—Eighteen survivors of the Athena disaster reached the United States and received a hysterical welcome from relatives and friends tonight as an air liner brought them here from Montreal.

Outfitted by a Montreal store and provided with transportation by a New York newspaper, the party showed little of the strain which marked their arrival at Halifax yesterday aboard the rescue ship City of Flint.

Those brought here were residents of the New York area, Philadelphia area or were refugees from Europe seeking haven in these areas.

Millionaire Waiter

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—A millionaire who was required to work as a waiter, and nearly 100 other American refugees from the war who did menial shipboard chores, arrived in Jersey City today aboard the liner President Monroe.

When the State Department pressed the former passenger liner, now a freight carrier, into service to pick up 204 passengers in Genoa, Italy, it was decided all the men would have to work. The ship had a crew of only 75.

Capt. Kenneth M. Graham had to take on extra supplies and life boats for the passengers. Some of the men were given jobs for which they were trained.

Thus Dr. Frank Scire, Government doctor on an Arizona Indian reservation, was made ship's physician, Michael Flacchetti, a former New York police captain, night watchman, and Emilio Greghino, Boston Tavern owner, tended bar.

Dishes Broken

But many other men did work they had never done before in their lives.

Walter Weinheimer, millionaire owner of a sugar company in the Philippines, was made a waiter. His wife and two children were also aboard. He admitted breaking a lot of dishes.

W. S. Neuman, a Cleveland physician, became bathroom custodian, and Dr. Rolfe Crum, president of Neff College in Philadelphia, washed dishes.

Other waiters were Prof. Gerardo de Jong, Jr., of Brigham Young University, Provo, Utah; William Robertson, in banking business in Amherst, Ohio; Joseph di Amato, a Boston high school teacher, and John Viglietti, Lucy, Tenn., farmer.

Bremen in Mexico

Port, Sailors Hear

Los Angeles, Sept. 14 (AP).—Passengers and crew of a Pan-American liner arriving today from Mexico City said there is rumor in Mexico the German liner Bremen is hiding in the Mexican port of Progreso.

Progreso is at the northern end of the Yucatan peninsula on the Gulf of Mexico.

lines south to the town of Sarreguemines.

These hills follow the line of the frontier through the little cities of Schoeneck, Stiring-Wendel, Spiechere and Fechingen, all of which have been taking a pounding from German heavy guns for two days.

The Germans withheld artillery fire on these hills in the early stages of battle to avoid hitting their own advance troops which were then in hand-to-hand combat with the French.

Mud Slows French

Even under heavy bombardment the French troops were to have begun slowly edging forward after having been delayed by the first rains of the autumn. Reports from the front said the weather had improved somewhat today.

Narrow side roads were slippery with mud, however, slowing down the progress of the French motorized units. Swollen streams increased the infantry's task of feeling its way through the broken countryside which already was pockmarked with gaping shell craters.

Only the central section of the northern flank appeared to be active as the French developed their feeler operations designed to bring them into contact with the main Siegfried Line.

Saarbruecken, which lies almost midway of this 100-mile northern flank between the Moselle and Rhine rivers, forms a keystone of strong German fortifications in advance of the German line. Except for a sector just east of Saarbruecken, where the French drove a narrow wedge into Nazi outposts, the German advance line of fortifications has kept the French advance at a comfortable distance from the main west wall.

German Fleets Grounded

For the last day and night the weather has kept German observation craft out of the air and has given the French a chance to sneak forward.

In front of Saarbruecken the French advance guards have circled slightly to the east, are in front of the town to the south and are approaching along the west bank of the little Moselle River to the west of the city where it would be possible to pinch off the Saarbruecken fortifications.

The French main line is being established along the hills south and southeast of the town with reinforcements moving up along the two highways and railroads. One highway runs from Forbach, which is five miles south and slightly west of Saarbruecken. The other is from Sarreguemines. The railroads parallel the highways.

Behind this main line the positions of the French artillery—famous French 75's and lean-looking 155 millimeter cannon known as "long rifles"—are concealed in the Wamdt Forest east of Saarbruecken.

French guns answering the heavy German shelling are pounding the Nazi advance lines that run through Saarbruecken suburbs from Gerswiller, 1½ miles west, around to St. Jean, an equal distance to the east.

Retire to Saarbruecken

The German picture shows a strong line of permanent fortifications of reinforced concrete block-houses linked up by pillboxes and machine-gun nests. Where this line has been penetrated by the French advance to the east the Nazi troops have retired into the outskirts of Saarbruecken proper, where secondary defenses were thrown up before the first line was forced to fall back.

The fortifications bulge out around Saarbruecken to protect the bridgehead where the two highways from France meet. In the heart of the city they cross the river over a sixteenth-century bridge known as Alie Brucke.

Pockets of the hills behind Saarbruecken, such as at Dudweiler, St. Ingbert and Friedrichsthal, provided ideal positions for German mortars to lob heavy shells over the advance lines onto the hills south of Saarbruecken.

Nazi Mass for Battle

Paris, Sept. 14 (AP).—British and French forces moved into advance positions today for a major offensive against Germany's Siegfried Line, behind which nearly 2,000,000 German troops were reported to be massing to meet the first big attack on the Western Front.

British scouting planes penetrating 15 miles behind the German Westwall were said to have reported that roads were clogged with Nazi troops, artillery and light and heavy tanks moving into the Siegfried fortifications.

Reports from Brussels tonight said

Re Star-Spangled Banner.
O day, can you see by the dawn's early light
What is proudly hoisted at the twilight's gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars through the clouds of the night,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, wave so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's red glare—the bomb's bursting in air,
To the flag that floats through the night—our flag—no more—
O day, that thou shouldst flourish so bravely
O'er the land of the free—the home of the brave!

Britain Promises To Spare Civilians

threat of indiscriminate bombing by the German high command, said Chamberlain, seemed on the face of it to be a clear contradiction of Adolf Hitler's statement to the Reichstag, disclaiming any desire to make war on women and children.

"The restrictions, we like the French, have imposed upon operations of our own forces," said Chamberlain, "were based upon the condition of a similar restraint being observed by our opponents and His Majesty's government must, of course, hold itself free if such restraint is not, in fact, observed, to take such action as it may deem appropriate. But I wish to add that whatever be the lengths to which others may go, His Majesty's government will never resort to deliberate attack on women and children or other civilians for purposes of mere terrorism."

When the roar of approval died down, Chamberlain went on to say:

"In the meantime it must be remembered that our strategy and tactics must at all stages be governed by one consideration and one only—namely the most effective prosecution of war."

"I will add that if action of the kind suggested in the German announcement is taken it will inevitably further strengthen the resolve of ourselves and our Allies so to conduct our policy and to prosecute the war as to ensure that the menace we are fighting—of which this may be another manifestation—is finally removed."

There was no comment on this from the Commons except from Will Thorne, Laborite, who asked Chamberlain:

"Does the prime minister recognize that this man (Hitler) is getting very desperate and as a matter of fact in my opinion, he will get more desperate later on?"

British Expect Worst

This, in fact, is the general belief of every one here who gropes through blackened streets at night and sees grim preparations being made to handle air-raid casualties on an unprecedented scale. British do not intend to be first to bomb crowded cities, but if bombs begin to rain on London, there is no telling what retaliation will follow against centers of the German military and industrial machine.

Meanwhile Lord Halifax reminded the House of Lords that Hitler had not only assured the Reichstag he would not bomb women and children, but had promised President Roosevelt through the American Charge d'Affaires in Berlin that he did not intend to bomb nonmilitary objectives.

Halifax also disclosed that Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson's last official act before receiving his passport was to transmit a note asking that Germany would observe the Geneva gas protocol of 1925 forbidding the use of gas or bacteriological warfare.

The German government has now replied in the affirmative to an inquiry through the Swiss Minister at London, who is in charge of its interests, said Halifax. He read a translation of the answer:

"The German government will observe the Geneva gas protocol of 1925 for the duration of the war prohibitions which form the subject of the Geneva protocol of June 17, 1925, and are mentioned in Lord Halifax's note of September 3, 1939. It reserves full liberty of action in the event of the provisions of the protocol being infringed by the enemy."

That a "violent" battle appeared to be in progress at the extreme northern tip of the Western Front only 500 yards from the border of the Duchy of Luxembourg where French troops led by tanks drove into German territory.

The French crossed the Moselle River in "large numbers" at 4 p. m., according to the Brussels dispatch, at a point opposite the Luxembourg town of Schengen.

Heavy machine gun and artillery fire was said to have resounded in Schengen, indicating heavy fighting.

Edison Urges Navy Search For New Ideas

Acting Secretary Feels Research Arm Should Be Expanded

Acting Secretary Edison yesterday proposed to carry out a plan of his late inventor father, Thomas A. Edison, and establish a great "idea-creating plant" at the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., with millions available annually for "pure" research into naval problems.

Calling in reporters for the third time during his nearly three years with the Navy, Edison talked at some length on the need for original research. He said that most of the $18,000,000 to $20,000,000 allowed the Navy for experimentation now goes for applied research, the improvement of already developed designs, and little to working with new ideas.

"There's too much attention paid to bringing out 'spring styles' of old principles," he declared. "We have fine scientists at Bellevue who will make a proper nucleus for an organization doing original work. Now they spend most of their time working out solutions of problems handed them by the department."

To carry out his plan, Edison transferred the laboratory from the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Engineering and gave it independent status under his personal direction. He also named Rear Admiral Harold G. Bowen, former Engineer-in-Chief of the Navy, director. The rest is up to Congress, he declared. Large industrial organizations allow at least 5 per cent of their gross income for research, and on this basis, the Navy should have 40 to 50 million a year, the Navy chief added.

Establishment of an original research laboratory was first recommended for the Navy by Thomas Edison in 1910. Later, when he served as chairman of the Naval Consulting Board, the elder Edison renewed his plea and Congress voted $1,500,000 for its establishment in 1918. Completion of the plan was delayed by the war, and after it opened in 1923, it was sought to build it into a great research center. Lack of funds, however, prevented carrying out Thomas Edison's original idea.

The plant now employs 224 civilians and has nine officers and 10 enlisted men, Edison said there will be no material increase in the laboratory staff for the present, but some may be added later.

British Announce Rules in Obtaining Visas for Empire

The British Embassy announced yesterday that visas, required for all aliens traveling in the empire, can be issued only by the British passport control officer in New York City and the British consuls general in Boston, Chicago and San Francisco.

Applications for visas, however, may be filed with the nearest British consul, for transmission to one of the issuing officers, officials said. Visas are required for all aliens traveling in British colonies, protectorates, mandated territories, India, Burma, Southern Rhodesia and Newfoundland, the embassy explained.

Liverpool Building Blows Up; 30 Hurt

London, Sept. 14 (AP).—More than 30 persons were injured late today in an explosion and subsequent fire in Liverpool.

The blast was heard for miles, and the wooden building involved was instantly enveloped in flames. The cause of the blast was not immediately ascertained.

British Tighten Blockade, Seize U.S. Ship Cargo

5,900 Tons Phosphate Taken Off Warrior of Mobile to Be Sold

By Max Harelson.

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 14.—The British government today intensified its drive to halt the flow of war supplies to Germany, declaring that "already large quantities of contraband have been stopped and prevented from reaching the enemy."

The admiralty disclosed that the Nieuw Amsterdam, flagship of the Holland American Line, was examined yesterday for contraband and that more than a score of ships were detained off the southeast coast today for searching.

Previously the ministry of economic warfare had announced seizure of the cargo of the Netherlands steamer Groenlo as suspected contraband and the searching of an American ship, the Black Osprey.

The Nieuw Amsterdam and the Black Osprey were released after search.

The first public notice of a war prize cargo published today stated that approximately 5,900 tons of phosphate from the American freighter Warrior, of Mobile, Ala., was now lying in barge at Purfleet, to be sold by order of the marshal of the admiralty.

When the cargo was seized and other details were not given.

(The Phosphate Export Association in New York said the Warrior's cargo had been paid for in cash by a German buyer prior to the ship's departure and that the association had no further interest in it. The association offices here said it had received no direct word of the seizure by the British.)

(Lloyd's register lists the Waterman Steamship Corporation of Mobile as the owners of the 7,551-ton Warrior.)

Plan to Starve Denied

A ministry of information communique tonight assured neutral powers that Britain had no intention of preventing them from importing foodstuffs and other material for their own use.

"The German wireless has distorted the purpose of the British contraband policy as setting out to strangle neutral trade and bringing starvation and death to old people, women and children in neutral countries," the communique said.

"Britain does not seek to dictate to any neutral government. She has already categorically declared that she will do all in her power to facilitate bona fide neutral trade."

"What Britain is endeavoring to do is to prevent the German government from importing goods and material which will enable them to prolong the war."

U-Boats Sink 2 More British Ships; Toll 18

144,645 Tons Lost;
Sea War Delays
Americans' Return

By the Associated Press

Germany's submarines, apparently concentrating their attack around the British Isles, struck twice at English merchantmen yesterday, raising the known count of British losses to 18.

Known German losses since the war began amounted to nine but only three were attributed to attacks by British ships. Three struck mines and three ran aground in Norway after changing course to avoid mines and enemy warships.

Total gross tonnage lost mounted to at least 144,645, excluding cargo worth several millions of dollars. An unidentified German destroyer was also excluded from the tonnage recapitulation.

The total number of ships lost in the war so far reached 32, including one French and four neutrals.

New Tanker Sunk

Latest victims of Nazi subs were the British Influence, a tanker built this year for the English-Arabian oil trade, and the British motor freighter Vancouver City, employed in the South Pacific-England trade and owned by the Beardon Smith Line, Ltd.

The 4,935-ton Vancouver City was torpedoed off the south coast of Ireland and her crew rescued by an unnamed Dutch tanker with the assistance of planes, according to a message from the United States liner President Roosevelt, which had been steaming to the rescue.

The 8,431-ton British Influence, owned by the British Tanker Co., Ltd., of London, was sunk about 300 miles off the coast of Ireland. Her crew was rescued by the Norwegian freighter Ida Bakke, the United States liner Manhattan reported.

Sea warfare was causing serious delay in the return of Americans from Europe. The Holland American Line announced that 1,700 Americans at Rotterdam and Antwerp would be delayed in sailing for home because the British held the liners Nieuw Amsterdam and Penland for a contraband search.

No Passage for Month

The Norwegian American Line announced in Norway that all passenger space had been sold up to October 17. The United States Maritime Commission planned to relieve the situation by sending additional American ships to Europe.

Ships of the United States lines meanwhile, were rapidly becoming the "mercy" ships of the sea. The American Shipper rescued the crew of 32 of the British freighter Blairlogie September 11 and the Washington saved 33 from the British Otago, when she sank after being torpedoed September 7.

Reports of German submarines in the vicinity of St. John, N. B., Canada, continued to pour in. A radio warning was dispatched from St. John today advising ships to proceed with caution in the Bay of Fundy.

G-Men Trained To Uncover Spies And Sabotage

By the Associated Press

A high Administration official revealed yesterday that for more than a year agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have been receiving intensive secret training in the technique of uncovering espionage, sabotage and subversive activities.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, has been in constant touch with officers of the naval and military intelligence units since fighting broke out abroad.

A Justice Department official said a secret mission took Hoover recently to the West Coast. At the time he announced the spreading of the bureau network along the Pacific Coast, Attorney General Murphy called attention to vital military, naval and aviation bases which extend from Southern California to Seattle. There are also important oil reserves and aviation plants in this region.

Details of the secret training of FBI men in spy investigation and allied problems have been closely guarded by the G-men. The schools, which met in units of 30 men each, were conducted by Hoover, whose experience in this work extends back of the World War days.

Rumania Internes 7 Polish Planes

Cernauti, Rumania, Sept. 14 (AP).—Seven Polish planes landed here today carrying 20 passengers, mostly elderly women and children and including the families of two Polish generals.

The Poles desired to continue their journey by air, but Rumanian authorities declined permission, insisting upon internment of the planes and warning the Poles that unless they departed within 48 hours it would be necessary to place them in an internment camp at Opatoni. The refugees were understood to be departing by train for Paris.

Col. Lindbergh To Address Nation Tonight

Airman to End Silence With Discussion of U. S. and the War

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh will break a long self-imposed rule against speaking in public with a Nation-wide radio broadcast tonight. He will be heard over WOL and WRC from 8:45 until 10 on "America and the European War."

He concluded five months' voluntary duty with the Army yesterday during which he made a special study of air research facilities in the United States. He submitted a confidential report on his findings to Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of Air Corps, and shortly afterwards was relieved of duty by Secretary of War Woodring.

Beyond the announcement of his broadcast, no light was cast on Lindbergh's future plans. Prior to his arrival here last spring, he had lived abroad for four years.

Lindbergh, an air reservist, was called to active duty April 19. He served two weeks on active duty and then continued in an inactive duty status without pay. Besides surveying scattered research facilities, lately he has been studying sites for a new air research center, voted by Congress last session, on his recommendation.

British Bombers Tell of Kiel Raid

pompano guns began to fire as we headed for home. My navigator saw shells bursting almost on the tail of the aircraft.

The second pilot, swooping across, took a photograph, which was subsequently found to be very blurred owing to the weather conditions at the time just before he dropped his first bomb.

Get "Some Hot Stuff"

"By now the sky had clouded over again. The aircraft were driving through blinding rain. As this bomber turned on the home-ward course the navigator noticed machine-gun tracer bullets nipping their port wing tip. They looked like small blue electric sparks."

The pilot of the third aircraft who saw the first bomb drop from the second bomber said, "To me it appeared to drop dead sideways."

"By now the battleship crew were all at action stations and I got some hot stuff."

He dropped his bombs and made a half circuit round the battleship. Wheeling, he noticed three bursts of antiaircraft fire at the leader's machine.

During the whole action only one German aircraft was seen. This was a German biplane, which few past and disappeared.

By 7:30 p. m. the flight were back at their station.

Another vivid account was given by the officers and crew of aircraft from another squadron which took part in the raid in the Kiel area.

One of the aircraft was hit several times both by shells and bullets, but returned home safely, although two of the petrol tanks were punctured. The remaining two bombers were not hit.

"We set out in fine weather," said the leader of this attack, "but we soon ran into a thick mist. One pilot became separated from the others, but he took up station again after ten minutes or so. We were near the German coast when half a dozen enemy fighters came out to engage us. A game of hide-and-seek in the clouds followed and our craft were successful in eluding their pursuers and left them behind."

"Conditions grew worse and there was heavy rain for an hour. The weather improved and my bombers gained height, giving a wide berth to all the islands along the German coast. We observed considerable activity by enemy merchant shipping. We made our landfall accurately and flew up the Elbe Estuary until we sighted a number of German naval vessels. We were then flying at 6,000 feet under a thin layer of cloud."

Nazis Held Fire

"The enemy held his fire until we were almost over our target, then suddenly he opened with every gun he could bring to bear on us. It was terrific, especially the firing from the big ships, which seemed to carry seven antiaircraft guns on either beam. You could watch the tracer shells rising after the flash of the gun, in spirals and follow the whole of their course."

"We made our aircraft as difficult targets as we could by maneuvering. We then straightened out and dropped our bombs. 'At once we rose up into the clouds with the shells bursting around us and made for home, after an effective smack at the enemy. Our flight all returned home safely."

Two of the returning pilots reported they sighted a submarine making for Germany on the surface at high speed. At sight of the British airplanes she dived precipitately. All the bombs had been dropped on the objectives in Germany, the pilots added, otherwise she would have been an easy victim. Another bomber, passed over Helgoland fortifications but was unharmed either by fighters or antiaircraft fire, the crew reported.

Does Your Nose Clog, Spoil Sleep

WHEN'S YOUR GOOD NEWS... If your nose "closes up" at night and makes breathing difficult, put a few drops of Vicks Vapo-rub on each nostril.

RESULTS ARE SO GOOD because Vicks Vapo-rub is expressly designed for the nose and upper throat, where transient congestion often hinders breathing. You can actually feel it go to work bringing relief.

News of Capital Night Clubs

SOCIAL REGISTER SPOT-MAYBE. A group of young society folks, including a society writer, are busy on a project to start a club that'll be the last word in ch-ch-ch. They're considering locating it in the big Dick Jowett House at the intersection of Florida and Connecticut avenues. Financing may be arranged through a membership arrangement similar to that of the Beach Club at Virginia Beach. The only fly in the ointment, we're told, is that $10,000 would be needed right off the bat for the reconstruction of the Jowett mansion. And that would be just a beginning.

Reasons why the coming night spot season promises to be the biggest ever: Not only will Congress be here very early, but the lobbyists are expected to descend in droves with bulging wallets.

SHAR-ZAD OPENS. Aladdin will have nothing on us this evening. For we're going to the opening of Shar-Zad, that enchanting place that looks as though it had been lifted right out of the Arabian Nights. Come to think of it, we'll fare better than Aladdin. For Aladdin could have rubbed his lamp to a fare-you-well and never been able to summon Bill McCune and his "Music of the Future," not to mention Souptress Catherine Hoyt, who are certainly lovely to look at and, we're sure, delightful to hear. Those very genial gentlemen you'll see hovering about will probably be Catherine's Manager, Frank Swadley, Jack Lear, chief of public relations for M. C. A., and Maître d'Hotel Alfred de Marzon.

Remember Libby Colman, the pretty blonde who used to sing at Madrilon? She's in Hollywood. But it isn't Libby who has the family's M-G-M contract. It's her handsome husband, John Lang.

TANGOES DE LUXE will be strutting in the Rainbow Room to-night in the tango contest that will mark the first leg of the "Harvest Moon Ball" promotion. A number of the town's cleverest dancers have entered the competition, including one brother and sister team. Be sure to be on hand at 10:30 to see the fancy stepping in the South American way.

So much was said about the tremendous opening party in the Mayflower Lounge that its head-dress redecoration was overlooked. Lighting, ventilating and acoustical experts have supplemented the efforts of the decorator. There's not the shadow of an echo in the place and the air-conditioning is now the last word. The lighting is rheostat controlled. There's a new bandstand for Dick Koons and his lads. In strict harmony are the new Saxony rugs and the rose and cream draperies. Furnishings are mostly black and gold with cream leather upholstery.

HI HAT SPECIAL BULLETIN. Oscar of the Hi Hat calls up to tell us the exciting news that the Ambassador Hotel will celebrate its tenth anniversary in an immense double-barrelled party on September 22 and 23. There'll be entertainment and orchestras in both Hi Hat and the Ambassador Room. Wise people will spend the entire afternoon and evening of both days at the Ambassador. For a special dinner of $2 quality will be served for just $1.

Arthur Todd, of the King Cole Room, is booked to make a grove of guitar and vocal recordings early in November for one of the biggest of the whirling platter concerns.

FACES AND PLACES. Lounge Riviera. Not among the wistful ones who had to stand and wait for tables were those beautiful young ladies, Patricia Prochnik, daughter of the former Minister from Aus-

Four army colonels, just a part of that neighborhood patronage that prefers the Uptown. They were not talking about the war.

By next week there should be some big news about the fall plans for the Cafe Caprice. Eddie White-sell continues to play a high-ten second at Caprice for afternoon and evening cocktail sessions.

Spotsylvania County Nurse Resigns Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 14.—The resignation of Miss Lynda Bray, Spotsylvania County nurse for five years, has been accepted by the County Red Cross, effective October 1.

A meeting of the Red Cross will be held at 8 p. m. Friday to discuss continuance of the nursing service and the possibility of naming a successor to Miss Bray.

Stephens City Gets Delivery on Fire Truck

Winchester, Va., Sept. 14.—The South End Hose Co. of this city, today delivered their engine and pumper to the Independent Hose Co. of Stephens City, recently organized fire department, in exchange for $1,000. The local company expects delivery of a stream-lined unit in October.

Julian D. Steele, merchant, has been named first chief of the Stephens City Fire Department.

"Oh, You Crazy Moon," as warbled by Mary Martin who's bubbling and very nicely, for Buddy Shanan. . . . Maryland Gardens All of those deft arrangements made by Johnny Rousseau for Lou Williams' orchestra. They'll be playing in the Gardens big Palm Room on Saturday eve. . . . Bamboo Gardens. The fine and unusual interlude music played by pianist John Fichette. He was playing the "Moonlight Sonata" in the other evening.

It should be good news to Washington night spot owners that one of the town's top gamblers (initials J. K.) cleaned up $65,000 in steel last week.

FOOD THOUGHTS. Hall's outdoor dining garden will have to close in a week or two. Better say joy one of those luscious seafood dinners in the "Garden on the Waterfront" while there's time. . . . These cooler days bring thoughts of the Mexican steaks glorified with chile and white pepper that are a specialty of Dick's Grill.

Tomorrow will be another big Saturday at the A. T. & S. Barbours down Alexandria way. Dancing to Dick Davis' orchestra which specializes on rhythm cut to fit jittery feet.

Admiral Bristol Left $70,000 Estate to Widow

Dear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, who died here May 12, left the bulk of his $70,000 estate to his widow, Mrs. Helen Moore Bristol, of 1821 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Mrs. Bristol, who was named executrix, filed a petition for probate of the admiral's will in District Court yesterday. She was represented by Attorney Neil Dickinson.

The estate included $48,000 in securities and $22,000 due Admiral Bristol in fees for handling the affairs of Edward R. McLean. The property was given to Mrs. Bristol, except for $10,000 to the admiral's nephew, John R. Bristol, of Brooklyn, Pa., and Mark L. Bristol, of Brooklyn.

The petition said claims against the estate amount to about $25,000, most of which is owed to brokers and is amply secured.

Wilson is All These... and More: It begins with many fine straight whiskies aged 4 years and over, with the mildness of 90 proof. These are blended with costly grain neutral spirits. All whiskies are spirits, too. Grain neutral spirits are made from exactly the same ingredients as whiskey... but being more highly refined, cost more to distill. They have the advantage of bringing out the best in each whiskey in the Wilson blend... make it smoother, milder and more appetizing to drink. That's why: WILSON IS THE LAST WORD IN WHISKY

Pilot Training Program Here Under Way

Woman Eager to Sign for Course At George Washington

Washington's first civilian pilot training program was under way last night with a veteran World War aviator as director and several persons, including one woman, eager to join up.

Approval to start the training program in the District was granted yesterday to George Washington University, the Civil Aeronautics Authority announced.

Director of the work here will be Norman B. Ames, professor in the George Washington School of Engineering and a major in the Army Air Corps reserves.

Prof. Ames said last night the university had asked authorization for training 50 pilots this year, but he had not received word about how many had been allowed. The flight training, he said, will be given at Congressional Airport, near Bethesda, Md., and at Beacon Field, near Alexandria. Prof. Ames served with the Aviation Signal Corps in France in the World War.

Among those who have told Prof. Ames they hoped to take the training is Miss Myrl O. Rhine, 1717 R street northwest, advertising production clerk for the telephone company, and publicity chairman for the American Association of University Women here.

Miss Rhine explained that she had taken a transcontinental air trip in the summer, and "decided I'd like to know an awful lot about planes." She said that while her eyes probably would prevent her piloting she wanted to take all the ground instruction.

George Washington was one of 54 schools whose training programs were approved yesterday, bringing to 220 the total of schools which will participate this year, CAA officials said. Also approved yesterday were training projects at Loyola College, Baltimore; Western Maryland College, at Westminster; and Hampden-Sydney College, in Virginia.

11 Prison Guards Are Drugged in Attempted Escape

Joliet, Ill., Sept. 14 (AP)—Eleven guards and a colored trusty at the Stateville Branch of the Illinois Penitentiary were drugged today in what Warden Joseph E. Ragen said was an unsuccessful attempt by three murderers to escape.

The convicts were captured as they ran toward a wall with a ladder constructed from materials stolen from the prison gymnasium.

Pan-American Cancels Atlantic Express Plans

Air express service on Pan-American Airways' transatlantic routes has been postponed indefinitely, officials announced yesterday. "Neutrality regulations" for the transatlantic service, sent yesterday to all ticket agencies of the Airway, banned sale of tickets to individuals connected with the armed forces of belligerent nations, and ordered regular inspection of baggage to avoid possibility of carrying contraband, officials said. Only air mail will be carried as cargo aboard the clipper planes, officials said, and the proposed inauguration of air express service to Europe has been deferred.

Rescuing a Rhinoceros by Burying it Alive!

A mountain of fighting flesh crashes into a trap! A rare, white rhinoceros is captured! It pounds the earth with huge hoofs, stamping, banging, seeking escape! Captain White knows that the rhino can walk itself to death by wearing out the pads of its hoofs, exposing vital nerve centers. A zoo can't use a dead rhino. It must be kept alive. But how? Nothing can lift the huge brute out of the pit. Comes the idea! Shovel the earth back into the trap. The rhino will pound it down. It works! Up comes the rhino, saved from a walking death by being buried alive!

Even the land of the white rhino knows the sign of the White Horse. In the fiery African heat, a long cool drink of White Horse and soda is as welcome as a letter from home. And at home, too, White Horse is first for summer thirst! Pour a generous portion of White Horse...let the ice cubes be plentiful and the dash of soda enough to fill your glass to the brim. On The Home Fronts

The forcible annexation of a fourth straight American League pennant by the New York Yankees must now be considered as—if we may borrow a phrase from our diplomatic and military experts—a fait accompli. And in well informed circles, this conquest is deemed merely the prelude to a fourth successive triumph in the World's Series.

But in view of the fact that it is still uncertain where and by whom an attempt to halt the Yankee aggressions will be made, it seems premature to speak with so much assurance. With only about a fortnight of the playing season left, the usual war of nerves is raging for mastery of the National League. The Cincinnati club, which has been out in front most of the season, is still out there—but not very far out. For some time now the Reds have been feeling on their necks the burning-hot breath of the St. Louis Cardinals.

A few weeks ago the Reds showed some signs of cracking under the strain. They have pulled themselves together quite heroically, however, and have won their recent series with the Cubs, all of them. Most of these were hard, close games—several went into extra innings—and it cost the Reds everything they had to win them. Yet, however hard they fought, there were the Cardinals right behind them.

Small wonder, then, if the nerve-racking events of the past few weeks have wrought certain alterations in the hitherto mild and benevolent personality of Mr. Bill McKechnie. It is reported that on recent occasions Mr. McKechnie so far departed from his accustomed mood of Christian charity as to address acrimonious words to umpires.

Undoubtedly the thing that has kept the Reds clinging to their precarious perch at the top of the National League has been the superior quality of the pitching. Mr. Johnny Van der Meer, last year's white headed boy, has been a disappointment, but Mr. Bucky Walters, the reformed Philadelphia infielder, has been little less than a gift from heaven to Mr. McKechnie. Between them, Mr. Walters and the veteran Mr. Derringer have won more than half of all Cincinnati's victories.

Among the other American League clubs this year the word has now gone out that against genuine corona-corona pitching Yankee Schrecklichkeit simply fails to materialize. While this seems not to speak very well for the average quality of American League pitching, there is probably something to it.

Of course, it takes more than two good pitchers to win a World's Series against the Yankees. Still, if the Reds manage to hold their current pace, we have reason to hope for a more interesting series than last year's.

Fighting Fire

A startling contrast was recently presented in the news from two great educational centers. School children were evacuated from London by their teachers, while at the same time over a million New York children returned to their classrooms with only the perennial sadness at summer's passing. While the differences between the situations were pointed, there were at the same time some telling similarities.

Some of these have been effectively pointed out by James Marshall, president of the New York Board of Education. "Although the setting was unusual," Mr. Marshall said, "the task assigned the teachers of London was not new." Addressing his remarks to American teachers, he declared they "must be on guard not to encourage hatred or unreasonable passions in the children whom they are training for a democratic civilization."

Never has this admonition been more important for our welfare. While some governments rely on force for their preservation, democracy's strength lies chiefly in its education of the people to govern themselves. Dictators must teach their citizens to obey unquestioningly. Again the opposite is true for us. We must cultivate constant awareness, constant questioning. And therein lies a paradox.

Our teachers are human beings. "And even a neutral," as President Roosevelt said, "cannot be asked to close his mind or his conscience." As individuals, therefore, most teachers have probably formed strong opinions on the war in Europe. But if, as teachers, they allow themselves to instill prejudice or emotional reactions into the minds of their pupils, they are falling into the totalitarian pattern. Force may be fought with force, but indoctrination can not be properly fought with further indoctrination. Only in another way can a democracy prove that intellectual strength must someday triumph over the other kind.

It is a serious and far from easy task that is falling to the teachers of the entire country as the schools open this week and next. Many mistakes were made 25 years ago and many will doubtless be repeated, if war continues. And yet the choice is clearcut. The alternative to clear reasoning on the basis of facts is likely to be a new series of blackouts and the prospects of another generation of children being led from the cities by their elders.

War In The West

Although the war on the Western Front is not yet in its third week, angry voices have already been raised in Allied countries in criticism of the seeming slowness of the Anglo-French drive against the German lines.

It is being pointed out that whereas Germany has already overrun more than a third of Poland, including that nation's principal industrial area, the Allies have penetrated German territory only to the extent of a few hundred square miles. Thus Poland may be conquered before any real dent is made in the Siegfried Line. Then the Allies would have to reckon with practically the entire German army directed against them.

In view of Poland's desperate plight, this impotence is understandable, if far from justified. Poland is bravely fighting a desperate rear-guard action against overwhelming odds. Unable to secure any direct aid from her allies, Poland's situation could be eased only if Germany were compelled to withdraw large numbers of men from the Eastern to the Western Front as a result of a serious threat to the Siegfried Line. So far she has been faced by no such necessity, with the result that the German steamroller in the east has been maintained intact.

It is possible, but not entirely certain, that a great Anglo-French drive on the Siegfried Line might succeed. The real strength of that network of fortifications, pill boxes, machine guns nests, mined areas, barbed wire barricades and other defenses is unknown. It may be that it is easier to break through than has been imagined. But there is little reason to believe that this is so. And the Allies have far too vivid memories of the expensiveness of frontal attacks on fortified positions to have any desire to rush foolhardily into such costly ventures at the outset of a war whose duration they fear will be prolonged.

Germany's attack on Verdun, in 1916, for instance, cost the Reich some 281,000 lives, while 315,000 Frenchmen were sacrificed to make good the boast of "they shall not pass." The Allied Somme offensive that same year also led nowhere, but Anglo-French casualties, before the fighting ended, amounted to the staggering total of 624,000 men with a German loss of 440,000. This experience suggests to the Allies the wisdom of husbanding their strength so that, when the proper time comes, it can be used to the best advantage.

Behind the screen of censorship, lifted only from time to time by laconic communiqués, it is impossible to know precisely what has been going on along the Western Front. But the fact is unmistakable that while the French advance has been slow it has also been steady, that it has resulted in the acquisition of between 350 to 500 square miles of German territory and that it has made sufficient headway to imperil the important German town of Saarbrücken. Should that advance continue, the valuable Saar region may fall into Allied hands.

That moment, however, is still far off. Thus far the fighting on the Western Front has been in the zone between the Maginot and Siegfried lines. There has been no breach of the latter. But that does not mean that the Siegfried Line will remain unbreached indefinitely. All it means is that the Allies are very wisely making sure of their ground before going ahead.

In avoiding heroic but possibly futile gestures, in achieving limited objectives with the least possible expenditure of men, they are pursuing a course which may prove wisest in the long run.

British Buying Plans

It is reported that the British government is preparing to handle war purchases in the United States through a joint British and French agency or agencies, instead of placing orders as it did during the last war through its fiscal agent—J. P. Morgan & Co. Such an arrangement would prevent the kind of competitive bidding by representatives of allied governments which boosted prices excessively during the last World War. It would also insure economies due to coordinated buying.

It has been officially announced that the British food ministry will have sole authority over the importation of all essential foodstuffs. It will also be responsible for domestic price control measures and for the organization and control of distribution.

Centralized buying of certain important staples acquired abroad is contemplated, and buyers have already been designated. According to information received from the American Embassy, plans are also under way for acquiring close to a year's supply of essential food imports, while prices are comparatively reasonable. These supplies can later be shipped as needed and as facilities for transportation become available.

Arrangements of this sort militate against such skyrocketing of prices as occurred during the last World War due to lack of advance preparation. This time profiteers will not find buyers such easy prey. Furthermore, there are a number of factors, apart from better buying organization, which will militate against excessive price increases. For instance, the United States Department of Agriculture, in an official release outlining the British plans, states that "reliable sources indicate that sharp curtailment [of consumption] through the medium of rationing cards is likely to be ordered sooner or later in meats, fresh fruits, imported luxuries and possibly sugar and fats."

The extent of such curtailment will, it is noted, depend upon such considerations as supplies on hand, world prices, ability to obtain foreign exchange and the adequacy of shipping facilities. This is an impressive list of incalculable factors which ought to give speculators occasion for thought. No doubt that is the main purpose of the Department of Agriculture's very timely release.

Price Control Problems

Addressing the National Petroleum Association at its annual meeting held in Atlantic City, Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, stated that the outbreak of war makes "nation-wide policing of combinations in restraint of trade and the control of profiteering more important than ever."

The problem that this country faces as a neutral is aptly described as "one of preventing the other fellow's war from distorting our economy" as it did in the period prior to our entry into the last world conflict. Due to lack of controls at that time, an economy was built up which, as the speaker reminded his audience, "depended upon perpetuation of the war to prevent its utter collapse."

Mr. Arnold, who heads the division of the Department of Justice charged with enforcement of the anti-trust laws, regards the Sherman act as the "front line of defense" against illegitimate price increases. He conceives the chief function of the enforcement agencies to be similar to that of a traffic officer striving to keep goods moving freely in the channels of commerce. Mr. Arnold disavows any desire to pose as a crusader setting out to destroy "bigness for the sake of trust busting." Indeed, he especially emphasizes the danger that trade associations, representing small businesses, may become agencies for giving effect to concealed price agreements.

The best defense against covert understandings that lead to unwarranted price advances is prompt investigation to disclose the facts. For example, Mr. Arnold says that in the housing industry—subject of the most extensive investigation which the Department of Justice currently has under way—various unreasonable trade restraints have already been eliminated as the result of the official inquiry. While the present emergency may make resort to positive regulation necessary in some cases, as Mr. Arnold warns, he is no doubt right in concluding that a vigorous, impartial and discriminating enforcement of the anti-trust laws will make direct control less necessary and much more limited in scope.

In the past, the Government has too often worked on the principle of not letting the right hand know what the left hand is doing. That has been especially true in dealing with business under the antitrust laws. The stress which the Assistant Attorney General lays on the importance of establishing close contacts with other Government departments to avoid duplication of effort is, therefore, encouraging—especially the reference to a "definite policy for more effective cooperation with the Federal Trade Commission."

By well-planned prosecutions under the antitrust laws, directed against positive abuses, the Department of Justice can perform a service for business as well as for the consuming public. For it is certainly not to the interest of businessmen to encourage or condone practices that lead to excessive price increases. Indeed, a group of leading industrialists and bankers who conferred this week with representatives of the Department of Commerce expressed fear that a runaway price movement might seriously retard the current business upswing.

The surest way to prevent such an untoward development is for Government agencies to keep themselves and the public fully informed about the facts of a wartime economy. And the law enforcement agencies must be ready at all times to prevent the profits of an expanding economy from becoming "the tools for furthering industrial aggression on the part of a few groups."

Will He Try To Stop It?

Letters To The Editor

Dictatorial Means

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am in despair over what certain autocratic Republicans are doing to my party, the Republican Party. A little while ago we were all stirred up about Roosevelt's determination to make himself dictator. Now, certain Senators are publicly stating that they are so convinced that they know more about what is right for this country than anyone else that if they think a majority of the people and the Senate oppose their ideas they will not permit them to vote on the question of removing the embargo. In other words, they mean to imitate Hitler and abolish the democratic principle of majority rule and flibuster to prevent a vote on an important question.

There is no exact neutrality. We abandoned international law in order to promise those nations which planned and prepared wars that we would protect their state of preparedness. The nations which hoped and worked for peace and, therefore, failed adequately to prepare for war would not sell to under the old established rules of international law, not even on a cash-and-carry basis.

Now Roosevelt and most of this Nation wish to go back to international law with some additional protections against America being drawn into war. Our cocksure "isolationists" not only intend to vote to protect the aggressor nations' state of preparedness but, if they see impending defeat, plan to refuse to permit a vote by flibustering. And they pretend to believe in democracy! They do it, if you please, in the name of Americanism! And what has become of our case against would-be Dictator Roosevelt? APPALLED SARAH Washington, Sept. 14.

Concerning "Agents Of Moscow"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of September 12, "Agents of Moscow," is timely. In fact, it is about time that the newspapers of this country were taking notice of this Communist menace to our Government.

Now people are learning American Communists are being financed by Russia with the sole object of undermining our Government and overthrowing it by force and violence, and placing us under the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Talk about having them register, what good would that do? The Communists would keep going as they have in the past, boring from within, and if we should be drawn into the present war they would combine against us and take over our Government. Don't tell me "it can't happen here."

The only way we can be sure that it won't happen here is to deport everyone who is in favor of overthrowing the American Government before it does happen here. DAN LINDSAY. Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I just read your editorial of September 12, "Agents of Moscow." In face of the fact that Browder has had a free hand and that the Dies Committee heretofore has been hampered through ridicule, it is indeed a noble and patriotic service you have rendered through this timely editorial. There has been evidence in this country of ours for a long, long time that much that is foreign to the American way was actively functioning within its borders.

Fingerprints

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Re your fingerprint article reprinted in Reader's Digest for August, I am convinced that every adult male in U. S. A. should be fingerprinted and compelled to carry a card bearing this print, his photograph, signature and criminal record, if any. THOMAS R. LYNCH. Los Angeles, Sept. 8.

Mr. Lippmann's Articles

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to tell you how gratified I am that Walter Lippmann has come back from his vacation. I regard him as a man of sound judgment, fair discrimination, far-reaching perspective, profound insight, and, withal, a marvelous restraint of expression that adds value and force to his opinions and conclusions. I am convinced that The Post clientele is safe and well-advised in reading his column.

Permit me to say also that I value The Post editorials most highly and regard them as being far above the average daily paper editorials. I thank you for them. MRS. G. P. BOSTICK. Luray, Va., Sept. 4.

Nazi-Soviet Pact

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The non-aggression Nazi-Soviet pact following the trade agreement was undoubtedly a master stroke of Hitler and his foreign minister, Ribbentrop. However, will the Nazis be able to pay cash for Russia's food and raw materials in a long war? Even in the case of a barter agreement it is difficult to see how Germany can pay with machinery, tools and other manufactured goods. Do not the Nazis bend all of their energies for the production of more instruments of war such as planes, artillery, etc., for the successful prosecution of the war against the Poles and the Allies? Should the Soviets not be willing to supply the Nazis with food and raw materials on credit, a crisis may occur.

In more than one of his speeches Hitler said: Should we (Nazis) get the Ukraine, the Germans would have plenty to eat. Now after conquering Danzig, the Corridor, Polish Silesia and perhaps the greater part of Poland the Nazis will probably be in possession of Polish Ukraine which adjoins Russian Ukraine. Will not the Fuehrer be tempted to restore "order" in Ukraine?

He has expressed his "sympathy" for the Ukrainians and desire to help them organize an independent Ukrainian state, probably under the "protection" of the Third Reich. Once in Ukraine, the Nazis will have all the food and raw materials they may need.

Does that mean eventually a simultaneous war against U. S. S. R. in the east and the Allies in the west? Hardly, at least not for long. The Nazis will organize the Ukrainians and enable them to fight the Soviets. It is this subtle, cunning trap, skillfully set by Hitler, that Stalin has apparently overlooked. Thus Russia's dictator has unwittingly offered Ukraine to Hitler on a silver tray.

It is true that the Soviets have a non-aggression pact with the Nazis. But Hitler has repeatedly shown that his treaties and promises of non-aggression are thrown into the wastebasket whenever Germany's interests require it in his judgment. Or does the Nazi-Soviet non-aggression pact contain a secret provision for an ultimate partition of Poland? The next few weeks or months may tell the tale. It will be a revelation of what the simply lives unto Europe. AN AMERICAN. Washington, Sept. 11.

Still A Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have tried to find an answer to the question, "Is the United States still a democracy?" but somehow or other there just prevails a mysterious silence. I don't want to make myself believe that the United States of America has come to that point where the simply lives unto herself, thereby forsaking the cause of humanity.

When the cause of Democracy is at stake, one would assume that the greatest democratic nation in the world would be the first to fight for its cause, but instead what do we find? The answer is as plain as the handwriting on the wall.

Neither the Democrats nor the Republicans would dare to declare war on Germany with an election so near at hand. Notwithstanding Hitler and Goebbels have ridiculed America to the whole world. They are prepared to remain neutral. Thus a great Nation is willing to sacrifice its pride, its dignity, and what is worse than all its principles. All this just to win a great political game that will take place in America next year. Democracy, where art thou? ALFRED E. REILLY. Toronto, Canada, Sept. 12.

The Post Impressionist

War Babies

WE ARE the war babies. We didn't even know it when our fathers went away. We laughed perhaps, and seized hold of their fingers with our baby hands. Perhaps we laughed at all the tears. We wondered who our fathers were when they came back—if they did come back.

We began to know what it was all about when we were 6. In the fall of the year we played around the horse chestnut trees, in bright sweaters, collecting the burrs. Aren't chestnuts good to eat? We toasted them in the autumn bonfires and found them hard and bitter—not like other nuts later. "These chestnuts aren't as good as the pre-war chestnuts," we said.

At 10 we knew American history. "The greatest American generals were Washington, Grant (or Lee, depending on where we lived) and Pershing," we recited in chorus. "My father knew Gen. Pershing—he saw him once." "My father was an aviator. He was shot down three times—that's why he limps." "Mine was a surgeon. Maybe he cut off your father's foot." "My mother was French. She married daddy when he was driving an ambulance. I was born in Paris in the middle of an air raid."

In high school we learned that democracy was the only right form of government—anyone in the world could see that. Why didn't all the countries have it, now that we had fought to make the world safe for it? Our hearts swelled up with pride of our great, rich and happy Nation. We made speeches about it in elocution class and on assembly days.

One college vacation we were lucky enough to spend the summer in Europe. We visited a lot of countries and saw things we'd been told to look for. We got along all right with our halting French or German or whatever it was. Young Europeans of our age seemed surprisingly like ourselves. They were at the universities, but they liked the summer walking tours best too. Some of them would begin their military service that year. Thank Heaven, we thought, we don't have to be set back two years in what we want to do!

It was a gay summer—full of song and beer. When we sailed for home in September we had exchanged addresses and promises to write.

That was the summer the Spanish war began, but no one took it very seriously at first. We were surprised—as the months slipped by—that all the accounts were contradictory. "What is happening?" we asked, and everyone had a different answer. But we were used to textbooks and sharp division between right and wrong.

We sided with the loyalists, instinctively. Our fathers were for Franco, but they said, tolerantly, "Youth is always radical, you know."

Now the Spanish war is over, and our side has lost, and we wonder why this war of ideals was so much crueler than wars of simple conquest.

Now for a year we've watched the news from central Europe until there seemed no reason and no hope in war, and no escape.

We've watched our fathers' faces, too. "It can't be possible," they said, "when barely 20 years have passed." And when we cried, "It's bound to come—let it be now," they turned to us sadly.

"You don't know what you're saying. You don't know what it is like. You are too young," they said. "It's good we're far away from it," said our mothers. "Maybe we can stay out of it this time."

That week of September, 1938, was an exciting one for us. The radio sent us from hope to terror and back to hope each time it spoke. When it was over we felt let down, but our parents looked relieved.

But again, once more in April, we read of troops massing along all borders, of cities blacked at night. We wrote to our European friends, "What do you think? Do you want to fight?"

Now at last it has come. This is the war we all were wishing for. Our fathers shake their heads. We await the letters from our friends abroad. For they will come—censored and delayed—they'll come to us.

They will be short and without. They must fight, they'll say, because there is no other choice. They'll say, "You named know what it is like—you are on the way." CAROL LACKY.

Contraband Schedules

By Ernest K. Lindley

U. S. List Borrowed

THE BRITISH government has issued a brief but inclusive list of articles of contraband. According to newspaper reports, the Germans have adopted the same list. There are two striking points about these lists.

The first is that the belligerents have taken, almost verbatim, the contraband list which we issued in June, 1917. We began then where the British had left off. The British began in 1914 with a rather limited list of articles of absolute contraband.

As the war progressed they added to it—about as rapidly as they thought neutral nations, especially the United States, would stand for the additions. In 1916 their contraband list was several pages long. Moreover, they abolished in practice the shadowy distinction between absolute and conditional contraband—the latter being articles treated as contraband if intended for the use of the armed forces of the enemy.

By the time we entered into the war it seemed to be a waste of space and time to enumerate hundreds of articles of contraband. So our instructions to our Navy bundled up almost every conceivable article into five brief descriptive paragraphs.

Now the same five paragraphs, with a few phrases added to make them airtight, appear in the contraband schedule just issued by the British government, and it is reported, copied by the Germans. If we protest we will surely be invited to eat our own words.

No Distinction Drawn On Arms

THE SECOND striking point is that no distinction is drawn between arms, ammunition and implements of war, on one side, and a vast range of other exports which are useful to nations at war. The absolute contraband list includes not only finished arms, explosives, chemicals and other war implements, but "materials or ingredients used in their manufacture," and "articles necessary or convenient for the production or use of such articles or ingredients."

Among other classes of products listed as absolute contraband are fuel of all kinds, all contrivances for transportation, all means of communication, and all articles or machines useful in the manufacture of these and many other products.

The contraband lists obviously don't fit our present neutrality act. Under that act we prohibit the export only of a few products under the heading of arms, ammunition and implements of war. We place no restrictions whatsoever on the export of all the other articles listed as contraband by the British and Germans. We place no restrictions whatsoever on the carrying of all these articles into the war zone by American ships.

Of course, we are not obliged to accept the contraband lists of the British and the Germans. We did not accept the British list during the World War. Our State Department pretended to object to the British lists and at one time our protests to the British became almost serious. But all that went by the boards, of course, when we entered the war, and outdid the British in the listing of contraband.

Everything Held Useful To Enemy

HOWEVER, THE British and the Germans—who are engaged in a death struggle and should therefore qualify as experts on this point—draw no basic distinction between the articles which we now embargo and hundreds of other articles which we do not embargo. They regard nearly everything as useful to the enemy in the contraband.

We can build up a war boom as easily from the export of trucks, oil, copper and hundreds of other articles as we could from the export of airplanes and shells. We can become a base of supplies for the Allies quite as easily through one type of exports as through another. We can become embroiled with the Germans over the sinking of an American ship carrying oil or trucks quite as readily as we could over the sinking of an American ship carrying shells.

The neutrality act, as it now stands, therefore fails to achieve, or even to approach, two of its main goals. One of these is to prevent incidents growing out of a blockade whether by surface ships or by submarines and aircraft. The other is to prevent us from building up a great war trade.

These deficiencies can be remedied. One step is to repeal the embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war, putting these articles on the same basis as the hundreds of others which the principal belligerents regard as contraband. The second step is to require the belligerents to carry away in their own ships all the articles which they buy from us. The third is to control the volume of our exports to the belligerents. In controlling the volume we can restrict especially the export of those articles of which we have limited supplies or which we can export only in limited quantities.

rected that cameras be sealed and that foreign planes be escorted by war planes of the canal garrison.

Lindbergh to Speak

It was announced, also, that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, just concluding five months of research survey work for the War Department, will speak on the radio tonight on "America and the European War."

The August report of munitions licenses and exports, issued by Joseph Green, chief of the Office of Munitions Control, showed that licenses during the month authorized exports to all countries valued at $3,887,246, while for the first eight months of the year the total value was $15,221,346.

Exports to all countries in August, during August, received supplies, now embargoed, valued at $3,443,200. Her imports of such materials from the United States, during the eight months were worth $15,651,318, as compared with $73,363,361 for which export licenses were obtained.

British Purchases Huge

Exports to Great Britain amounted to $44,332 in August, and $21,159,427 for all of 1939 to September 1. Her export licenses for the 8 months totaled $21,159,427.

Canada received war-making exports valued at $124,688 in August, and $716,894 for the eight months. Shipments to Germany totaled $13,421 in August and $22,664 for the eight months.

Secretary Hull's statement was issued as a broad outline of the United States' attitude toward the blockade, counter-blockade and similar activities of European belligerents.

While making it public, the Secretary told reporters he saw nothing seriously unusual in the recent stopping of American ships by vessels of the fighting powers. He indicated that no serious violations of international law thus far had come to his attention, though the full facts are being assembled in all such cases to ascertain whether action is called for. Reminding reporters that one American ship, the Wacosta, which had been run into port by the British, was being released, he observed that some cases adjust themselves if given time.

His use of the words "for the time being" in reference to American legislation restricting the rights of nationals in dealing with belligerents was in use with the Administration's efforts to bring Congressional revision of the neutrality act, embargoes on munitions and forbidding loans to warring nations, and restricting American travel on belligerent ships.

Athena Plays Part

He said that while retaining all American rights, the Government is warning American ships and citizens against any danger spots that come to its attention and added that it "must expect American nationals to exercise due diligence in keeping clear of danger—actual or potential."

Earlier, Stephen T. Early, the President's press secretary, said the activities of submarines and the sinking of the liner Athena were factors in leading the President to call the extra session.

Revealing some of the problems facing the munitions control office, "twenty times as complicated," as when only the Spanish civil war had to be watched, Green said that unusual orders for munitions for any neutral country arouse immediate suspicion. Since exports to neutral countries for reshipment to belligerents is forbidden, his division keeps closely in touch with the munitions needs of all countries. In some cases, he said, definite assurance of the government to which the munitions are to be shipped that they will not be reshipment may be required before licenses are issued.

In this connection he said that while Great Britain and France might sell to neutral countries the embargoed fighting planes they have on order here, they could not buy back the planes after the equipment has been delivered to the purchaser.

Marking progress in its efforts to get endangered Americans home from Europe, the State Department estimated that more than 20,000 Americans returned home in the two weeks ending September 7.

"Additional facilities for the transportation next week (week ending September 23) of a greater number of passengers will be available," the Department said.

It made no estimate of how many Americans still were in Europe and wished to return.

Every operator of a freight steamer carrying the American flag has been requested to make his vessels available to American citizens at any port of call in Europe, and American consular officials have been authorized to issue emergency certificates enabling such ships to carry extra passengers.

Others who commented on the new service were Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor: "With the addition of the New York Times service, The Post certainly covers the war news with complete accuracy. I depend upon The Post to keep me posted."

District Attorney Pine: "I congratulate The Post on adding to its services The New York Times war dispatches. This will be of great benefit to many readers who know the reliability and accuracy of the Times' coverage of important news events."

Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission: "The addition of the New York Times service gives in The Washington Post all the war news anyone could ask."

Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspections for the District: "The New York Times foreign service is a fine and worthy addition to The Post."

G. M. Thorne, secretary to the District Commissioners: "The Post, with the New York Times and other services, now gives a most comprehensive report of what's going on in Europe."

Capt. Ira E. Keck, assistant chief of detectives: "It is a very fine addition. In my opinion The Post was excellent before and did not need the new service, but I feel that with this feature we will get from The Post even better war coverage than before."

Detective Serg. Hoyle D. Secret: "The Post has always given me the best newspaper. I find the New York Times dispatches a satisfactory addition to the service furnished by The Post."

Clyde N. Richardson, Police Department stenographer: "Since The Post acquired the Times service I find more authentic war information than it was possible to find before."

Attorney Jean Boardman: "The addition of the New York Times war service is a great step forward for The Post, which, I think, is insuring a complete and accurate picture of the war in Europe."

William E. Leaky, attorney: "I am glad The Post has added this fine service to its sources of war news. I don't think we can have too much war news of the accuracy and authority of the New York Times service."

Borah Warns On Intervention

will be available when the embargo law is repealed?

"And if we do these things, is not neutrality destroyed and are we not then forced by every rule of international law—by every dictate of common sense and common honesty—parties to a European conflict?"

Borah refrained from stating which belligerents repeal would benefit. Administration leaders have acknowledged, however, the lifting of the embargo would allow American arms to go only to the Allies, the Anglo-French naval blockade preventing shipments to Germany.

Assails 'Spineless' Doctrine

The Idahoan denounced as "spineless" doctrine he charged is now being raised that "modern inventions, the proximity of Europe and the mingling of business affairs make neutrality impracticable if not impossible."

He asked: "How smotheringly close was the European system when Washington announced its policy of neutrality and published it to an astonished and enraged Europe?"

"Brazil belonged to Portugal. Practically, the balance of South America was owned or controlled by the Spanish crown. The West Indies belonged to England, France and Spain combined."

"On our Northern frontier were heavily garrisoned by European regulars. The Indians were being used by European powers to harass our people and all Europe mocked at the idea that this young republic would long remain an independent Government."

"But Washington said we will be neutral... Had he not so declared, and made good, does anyone doubt the devastating effect upon freedom, upon liberty, upon this republic?"

Maintenance of Washington's policy, Borah declared, will preserve the United States as "a power standing not for force, cruelty and injustice, but for peace, fair dealing, reason and justice."

"In this way we will have rendered all nations and all peoples a service far greater than it will ever be possible for us to render by joining any nation, or nations, in carrying on war."

Hears Talk of Fighting

Adoption of the arms embargo in 1917 when Britain and Germany were at peace, Borah said, represented the then "overwhelming desire to cut out the sale of arms to warring nations... and help keep us out of foreign wars."

Today, he said, "the talk in Washington is no longer that of merely furnishing arms—it is said we must prepare to fight." Borah quoted the recent remarks of a colleague on the Foreign Relations Committee (apparently Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah), saying: "One of my colleagues, a most able and sincere Senator, declared a few nights ago publicly: 'Let us give up this dream of impartiality, therefore of neutrality. It is better, he said, to take sides and fight!'"

"He was speaking out boldly what is now heard from the same sources from which came the agitation for furnishing arms. If, in a few months we can tear up the law which a nation almost universally approved, how long do you think it will take to put across the proposition of sending our young men into the trenches, once we have intervened?"

Hull's Text On Neutrality

Law Still Subsists

Yield No Rights

The text of Secretary Hull's statement on neutrality issued yesterday follows:

The Government of the United States has not abandoned any of its rights as a neutral under international law.

It has, however, for the time being prescribed, by domestic legislation, certain restrictions for its nationals which have the effect of requiring them to refrain from the exercise of privileges which but for such legislation they would have the right to exercise under international law, such as the right to travel on belligerent vessels to make loans and extend credits to belligerent governments, etc.

Measures Do Not Modify Law

These restrictive measures do not and cannot constitute a modification of the principles of international law but rather they require nationals of the United States to forego, until the Congress shall decide otherwise, the exercise of certain rights under those principles. Furthermore, this Government gives the widest possible notice to American shipping regarding the danger involved in the information is acquired by it.

This Government also warns American nationals and American shipping against actual danger in any other respect situation involving such danger are brought to its attention, whether those situations result from lawful or unlawful activities of the belligerents. It endeavors to exercise all due diligence in the protection of American lives and property and of course must expect American nationals likewise to exercise due diligence in keeping clear of danger—actual or potential.

In the letters which I addressed to Senator Pittman and Representative Bloom on May 27, 1939, I stated the situation as follows: "The rights of our nationals under international law may properly be restricted by our own legislation along certain lines for the purpose of avoiding incidents which might involve us in a conflict. In indicating certain restrictions upon the exercise of our rights as a neutral I do not wish to be considered as advocating the abandonment of these, or indeed any, neutral rights, but rather as reasonable ground for restricting at this time the exercise of these rights."

Principles of Law Still Subsist

The principles of international law as regards neutrals and belligerents have been evolved through the centuries. While belligerents have frequently departed from these principles on one pretext or another, and have endeavored to justify their action on various grounds, the principles still subsist.

This Government, adhering as it does to these principles, prescribes the rights of the United States and its nationals under international law and will adopt such measures as may seem most practical and prudent when those rights are violated by any of the belligerents.

Arlington Civic Group Objects To Site for Park

The Arlington County Civic Federation has petitioned the county government not to purchase 10 acres in the Glen Carlin area for a site for a park. The federation said the grounds are not suited to picnic grounds and prudent when those rights are violated by any of the belligerents.

A provision to restrict the indiscriminate construction of large and small-scale apartment houses in the county was drafted by the county public utilities committee said it would conduct public meetings in the fall to discuss power distribution in the county.

Takoma Red Cross Drive Opens Oct. 1

The annual roll call drive for the American Red Cross in the Takoma Park, Md., and D. C. area, begins today and lasts through October 1. It was announced last night by Mrs. Frederick A. Johnston, chairman.

The captains appointed by Mrs. Johnston for various sections are as follows: Mrs. Charles Gardner, Mrs. Charles R. Copernicus—The European

I WONDER WHETHER the German bombardment of Torun has destroyed the statue of Copernicus—Nicolaus Koppernick. The statue of the great astronomer stands in a prominent spot in the little Polish city. The tall figure wrapped in the bronze folds of a medieval scholar's dress shows a face with wise and far-looking eyes. Whenever I think of Torun, that strategically critical city on the Vistula between East Prussia, the Reich and Poland, the so-called Corridor. I see this statue—I see this, and the ruined castle of the Teutonic Knights, and hundreds of Polish citizens of Torun, with many, many children kneeling on the stone floor of the cathedral listening to the Easter mass—it was Easter when I was there.

Copernicus, the ruined castle, and the Easter mass: all have something to do with Torun, something that belongs to the past and to the dreadful present. A perennial battle has waged around the figure of Copernicus. The Germans claim that he was a German; the Poles that he was Polish. Copernicus, it seemed to me, looked out across the trivial battle raging around his feet. Racially, he seems to have been neither a German nor a Pole. He was a European.

The name is a Baltic name, and dates from pre-nationalist times. Centuries after his birth and death it was to become, if not famous, notorious again, for in 1906 a German ex-convict, unemployed and desperate, bought a second-hand uniform out of a junk shop, put it on and with it became briefly the ruler of the small German city of Kopenick, undoubtedly a corruption of the scholar's name. The ex-convict adopted the city's name as his own.

As the great Koppernick discovered that the earth moved around the sun, so this second Koppernick made the discovery that nationalist Germany moves around a uniform, more or less regardless of the man inside it. He was the precursor, it would seem, of another and greater, in whose name today the Germans hail.

Early Teacher Was a Pole

THE GREAT Koppernick (Copernicus) was adopted by an uncle whose name I should think was German; Watzelrode. But he was born in a city which had been Polish, then German and then Polish again—as we shall see. His earliest master in mathematics was a Pole, Albert Brudzewski, who taught him in the University of Krakow. But Copernicus lived at the end of the fifteenth century and the beginning of the sixteenth before nationalism had erected barriers between men and races, when all Europe was Catholic, the university pan-European, and when all educated men spoke a common language: Latin.

He pursued his studies in Bologna and Rome and Padua and Greece, and he was an astronomer, a doctor of canon law and a physician. In his role as a physician he ministered to the population of Torun, especially to the poor, who then, as now, were Polish.

Lived in a time when no educated man thought of himself as anything less than a citizen of Western civilization: in a time when standards of thought were universal; when such a thing as "German" science would have been considered a joke. But beyond being a European of Polish birth, he was concerned less even with Europe than with the universe, in which he saw this little planet not as the center of the universe at all. The center of the universe was the great sun; the earth moved around it and not the universe around the earth. This planet was but a humble member of an immense system moving according to yet undiscovered laws in supreme grandeur.

I wonder if the bombs have spared this lonely, lofty figure.

Torun Founded By Teutonic Knights

TORUN WAS founded by the Teutonic Knights, that German order who spread Christianity by the sword, at the same time acquiring lands for themselves in the Slavic countries around Germany. In the thirteenth century the Poles invited them there to help the Poles against the barbarian and pagan Russians!

In the course of time the city became part of the complex of towns ruled by the order, the Hanseatic League, with its political and commercial interests, however, binding it to Poland—as Danzig's interests are bound.

In the fifteenth century the city revolted against the order, and seven years before the birth of Copernicus Torun was annexed to Poland. And Polish it remained until it was seized by Prussia at the second partition in the eighteenth century. Yet, even after that, it was returned to the grand duchy of Warsaw—the remnant left of Poland after the partition—and seized again in 1815. It returned to Poland when the original borders were restored in 1918.

Bismarck Failed, So Will Hitler

BUT THE MEN, women and children kneeling on the cathedral floor at the Easter mass were witnesses of a struggle which the Germans never won.

Bismarck, in his effort to make a united Reich, waged a fight against the Catholic Church which lives in Polish memory as the hated "kulturkampf." He forbade the clergy to discuss questions of state in the pulpit; he sought wholly to secularize education and marriage; he even tried to supervise the training of priests, to make of them good Germans rather than good Catholics and Europeans.

Therewith he assisted in an enormous nationalist revival in Prussian Poland which was to bear its fruits in 1918.

Torun's great memories are of Copernicus' time, when Europe was united and in a common faith, with room for every race and every nationality. Bismarck could make the Poles forget neither their language nor their religion, and by attempting ruthlessly to Germanize them he lost them.

So, even if he conquers them, will Hitler.

War And The Radio

"A fine thing, radio!" sneered Elmer Twitchell as he tuned in without getting any war news. "Imagine it! Not a war bulletin in the last 15 minutes!"

"You've got to have patience," cautioned Mrs. Twitchell. "After all, the war isn't on a radio-sustaining program yet."

Mr. Twitchell twisted the dial and got a thin voice telling him about "Pulverized Poplets, the Ideal Breakfast Muesh."

"Shells falling over the cities of Europe, bombs dropping through the air like snowballs across the sea and the radio gives me Pulverized Poplets!" roared Elmer. "There oughta be a law!"

"Remember," said Mrs. Twitchell severely, "that radio is a business proposition, supported by paid advertising, and no toothpaste, hair oil or cereal company is sponsoring that European conflict."

He got another station, and a lady with a kiddie voice was talking the beauty of the Gaskills up with a recipe for baked beans.

"Baked beans!" snarled Elmer. "The fate of the civilized world hangs on a thread and my radio set gives me baked beans!"

"Oh, cut it out!" rebuked Mrs. Twitchell. "The radio has been full of war news for a week. Baked beans should come as a great relief. What do you want, anyhow? A major engagement every 15 minutes, with incidental music and five cash prizes in a missing word contest?"

Elmer bent close to his radio and got another station.

"... but the bombers got away safely. Brooklyn is now leading five to three... came from the loud speaker."

"What bombers? Where? See!... I get in just at the end of a big bombardment, maybe of London, Berlin or Paris, and am dumped right into a Brooklyn baseball game!" shrieked Mr. Twitchell, quite purple. "There's no system. Why don't they keep them ball games off the air at a time like this?"

"Why don't they keep those air raids off the air at a time like this?" countered Mrs. Twitchell. "You forget there are more baseball fans in this country than there are air raid fans."

Mr. Twitchell was going frenziedly through his paper, checking up on the radio programs.

"Ah!" he cried. "Here it is. A special broadcast from the London war office. It's on now." He leaped to his set and got the station.

"Comes Love, Nothing Can Be Done," shrieked a soprano.

Mr. Twitchell swept the set from the table and leaped from the nearest window.

Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefe, chairman of the District Red Cross Chapter, yesterday urged increased support for the roll call drive to help meet a growing war demand for Red Cross services.

Gen. Keefe said that the District chapter had been asked by Norman Davis, national chairman, "to strengthen all its services in order to meet the demand for increased assistance arising from the European conflict." "One of our first steps is to perfect all roll call plans, as large membership funds will be needed to carry on this work," Gen. Keefe said. "Due to the distressing European situation, in addition to our routine requirements, we expect that this year's will be the largest roll call ever achieved in Washington."

Preparing 5,200 Garments

Gen. Keefe said that the local chapter, at the request of national headquarters, is preparing 5,200 garments for the wounded and civilian refugees, and 8,750 surgical dressings for hospitals in France. He said that the local volunteers had already prepared its quota of sample dressings, designed according to French specifications, for guidance of other chapters.

War-relief sewing projects, he said, have been assigned to 37 auxiliary units, working under direction of Mrs. P. J. Altizer, and bandage production is being directed by Miss Grace S. Wright.

Bar to List Candidates for Court Vacancy

Murphy Is Slated To Suggest Appointee To President Soon

The District Bar Association's committee on judicial selection is scheduled to meet today to consider recommendation to Attorney General Murphy of candidates for the place of the late Justice Cox of the District Court. The Attorney General is expected to suggest an appointee to President Roosevelt soon, although yesterday he said he had not yet taken up the matter.

Appointment of a Washington attorney is understood to be desired by the committee, since the last two vacancies in the court have been filled by out-of-town men.

District Attorney Fine is favored in many quarters for the judicial post. Fine made "speedy justice" his goal and attempted to have every ordinary case disposed of within three weeks of indictment.

Also favored by prominent lawyers was Assistant District Attorney Wilson, a veteran trial lawyer, who was at his chief's right hand in the Waring numbers trial and other prosecutions. Wilson, it was reported, would be receptive if Fine should prefer to remain at his present post.

Other Washington attorneys mentioned frequently in discussion of the vacancy were Seth W. Richardson, Seldon Darr, president of the District Bar Association and advocate of the "streamlined" small claims procedure in Municipal court; Arthur P. Drury, Corporation Counsel; Elwood Seal and E. Barrett Prettymann.

Henry I. Quinn is chairman of the committee on judicial selection.

Battered and Torn, Squalus Is Up

Crushed conning tower of the submarine Squalus, put in dock yesterday at Portsmouth, N. H. The damage was done by pontoons which tore loose from the sub in July when first attempt to lift it was made. The Squalus sank May 23 and proved a death trap for 26 seamen.

Midwest Boils In Third Day Of Heat Wave

Thermometer Hits 102 in Springfield, O.; No Relief in Sight

By the Associated Press
Chicago, Sept. 14.—The Middle West baked in an unseasonably late heat wave for the third successive day today with no prospect of immediate relief.

Temperatures mounted to new records for this date. At least four heat deaths were reported and late farm crops were damaged. Schools were recessed early in parts of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa and South Dakota.

High temperatures—most of them new tops for the date or season—included: Springfield, Ohio, 102; Decatur, Ill., 101; Lincoln, Neb., 100; Cincinnati, 99.4; Chicago and Indianapolis, 99; Milwaukee and Detroit, 98; Des Moines, Columbus, Ohio, and Omaha, 97; Toledo, Ohio, and Minneapolis, 95; Pierre, S. Dak., 93; Cleveland, 90.

Readings ranged from 93 to 98 in Kentucky. Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota and Illinois each recorded one death.

In Indiana, where little rain fell during the last 45 days, pastures were burned and late corn and tomato crops were damaged.

Water shortages threatened in rural Missouri and Kansas, where many schools were on half-day schedule. Pastures were brown in several sections and fruit crops scorched.

Eastern States experienced comfortable weather. Philadelphia had a normal 88 and New York enjoyed "a beautiful day." Owls Head in northern New York State had frost this morning.

Krakaukas Faces Browns; Masonic Day Tomorrow

The week-end will be a busy one at Griffith Stadium. Tomorrow will be "Masonic Day" with the Masonic Band in attendance as the Nats tackle the Browns in the finale of the series. In addition, the first game of the finals of the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament will be played starting at 12:30 o'clock. The Nats-Browns game begins at 3 o'clock. Masonic Day ceremonies will take place at home plate before the game.

"Johnny Stone Day" is booked for Sunday. At 12:30 o'clock the second game of the N. A. B. F. will be played. At 3 o'clock, the Nats open their series with the Detroit Tigers. Between games, the Johnny Stone presentations will be made by Vice President Spike Briggs, of the Detroit club, and President Clark Griffith, of the Washington club. A special Johnny Stone program will be sold with proceeds going to the former Nats' outfielder. At both of the week-end programs, one admission will be charged.

Joe Krakaukas will try his slants against the Browns today. Al Evans, rookie receiver, will do the catching.

Allen to Throw Out First Skater

District Commissioner George E. Allen is expected to cut the tape restraining the skaters tonight to launch the new season at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace rink, it was announced last night.

Allen, it was said, will be on hand unless unforeseen civic duties prevent it.

An attractive opening night program has been arranged, featuring exhibitions by the Ice Palace instructors, Delores Ziegfeld and Norval Baptie. Miss Ziegfeld is a first cousin to the late Florence Ziegfeld, while Baptie for more than 20 years was the world's fastest skater. Now close to 60 years of age, he still is incredibly agile on the ice.

President Plate Golf Scheduled October 20

The President's Plate, annual 18-hole event of the Women's District Golf Association for the executive committee and past presidents, scheduled September 26 at Columbia, has been changed to October 20, over the same course, according to Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the association.

The change was made to avoid a conflict with the Columbia men's club championship, slated the week of September 25-30.

D. C. Traffic Fines Double 1937-38 Total

Speeding on Wane, Tipster Driving Gaining, Seal Says

Fines and forfeitures collected in Police Court in traffic cases last fiscal year were more than double the figure for the previous year, Corporation Counsel Edward H. Seal disclosed yesterday in his annual report.

Collections for the fiscal year 1938-39 were $360,481.61, or an increase of $244,891.83 over 1937-38.

Speeding violations, however, fell below the previous year's record. First offense cases dropped 2,634 to 8,538. Second offense violations fell 316 and third offense cases were 40 below 1937-38.

Tipster Driving Increases

Cases of drunken driving increased from 346 to 366, while intoxication charges having no relation to traffic jumped 1,468 to 14,686. Reckless driving charges were 151 fewer than the year before, and "expired permit" cases fell 150.

Substantial reductions were made in the number of prosecutions for violations of police regulations, disorderly conduct, vagrancy, and alcoholic beverage control act offenses.

A total of 47,830 infractions were filed in police court, 7,540 below the previous year, and fines and forfeitures aggregated $475,149.57.

There were 2,846 proceedings instituted in juvenile court and 4,500 court hearings were held.

Hard On Lamp Posts

The corporation counsel's office, besides writing 830 opinions for the commissioners, collected $143,464.99 from the estate of insane persons to reimburse the District for the care and treatment of the patient at municipal expense.

Collections aggregating $1,497.89 for damage done to lamp posts also were reported by Seal.

The corporation counsel, besides acting as liaison man on Capitol Hill between the Commissioners and Congressional committees, drafted 41 bills, of which 19 were passed by Congress, and prepared 83 reports on pending legislation.

Argyle Club Title

Tourney Postponed

Wilbur Taylor, chairman of the golf committee at Argyle Club, announced the second round in the four flights and consolation of the club championships, scheduled Sunday, have been postponed until the following Sunday, due to the team matches with Hillendale over the nine-hole course.

The matches will also interfere with the first flight in the other club tournaments, but the lower flights will play as scheduled.

McChesney Wins Owens Golf Trophy

Robert McChesney won the Henry Slicer Owens trophy in the annual field day of the Cosmopolitan Club yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club.

McChesney's gross score of 84 won the cup in its second year of competition by a two-stroke margin over Dr. Francis M. Murray, who posted an 86. Maury Colbert had 101, William L. King, last year's winner 104, and Paul Holmes a like total. The trophy must be won three years for permanent possession.

Edmund O. Carl, president of the club, presided at a dinner, following with John Reilly in charge of the entertainment.

Capital Gayety Will Be Resumed Next Week as Legislators Return

Senators Already Are Pouring Into Town And Half of House Is Expected Over Week-End; Mrs. Roosevelt to Stop Over

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

WITH CONGRESS STARTING next Thursday and Autumn coming along two days later, the Capital whirl will be well under way by this time next week. Senators already are flocking back to town; at least half "the House" will come in over the week-end, and others who will make The Hill hum during this season will be at their desks well before Thursday.

Mrs. Roosevelt is expected at the White House some time tomorrow, but only for a brief stay. She plans to stop there over night on her way back to Hyde Park after a lecture tour in the South.

Exactly when Vice President and Mrs. Garner will head eastward, nobody seems to know. But chances are, they will leave Uvalde, Tex., just in time to make it here by Wednesday.

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead, who are still at their home in Jasper, Ala., are expected to arrive here Tuesday.

Already in town and spending a good part of their time on duty are Senator William E. Borah, who recently returned with Mrs. Borah from Poland Springs, Me., and Senator Bennett C. Clark, who, with Mrs. Clark, came back to the Capital Tuesday morning.

Senator Sheridan Downey checked in on Capitol Hill yesterday morning. Mrs. Downey, who is on her way to Washington from California, is expected to be here Saturday.

ALSO BACK IN TOWN for the season are Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, who have been calling Bluemont, Va., "home" all summer.

Senator Alben Barkley, who is still with his family in Paducah, Ky., is expected to return Monday or Tuesday.

Senator and Mrs. Arthur N. Vandenberg, who have been vacationing at Lakewood, Mich., are now in Grand Rapids. They are expected back in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel early next week.

SENATOR STYLES BRIDGES had planned to begin his Presidential campaign tour this month but will have to curtail his program considerably in order to get back for the Congressional opening. Originally, he has scheduled a series of lectures across the country, on to the West Coast. However, as the situation is now, he will start out today, go only as far as Omaha, and then return to Washington next week.

Senator Theodore Francis Green, who recently returned "steering" from Europe and has, since then, been visiting friends in Newport, is now back in Providence, R. I. He will come to Washington on Tuesday or Wednesday.

ON HIS WAY to his home in Texarkana, Tex., was Senator Morris Sheppard, when he heard the date had been set for the special session. He and Mrs. Sheppard and their daughter, Lucille, who will return to her studies at Wellesley College this month, are expected to be in Washington the latter part of next year.

Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, who have recently been visiting in Newport, R. I., are now in their home in Burlington, Vt. They will start to Washington early next week.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge is expected to arrive Tuesday from Beverly, Mass. Mrs. Lodge and the children plan to join him here within a few days.

STILL CRUISING on Mrs. Joseph Davies' yacht, Sea Cloud, are Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, but the Senator will be on hand for the roll call on Thursday.

Senator James J. Davis is in New York on business for a few days, but will return this week-end. Mrs. Davis and their daughters are still at Nantucket, Mass., where they spent most of the summer.

Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron, who enlivened the social scene at Rehoboth through most of the vacation season, have returned to their home at Williamsport, Md. They will be back in Washington Wednesday.

Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth is expected to return to the Capital Thursday morning, but Mrs. Wigglesworth will not come down until later.

Representative and Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, who recently sailed home from a vacation in the Scandinavian countries, are now at their residence in Dunkirk, N. Y. They will be back at the Roosevelt Hotel Tuesday.

'Refugees' Return Home From Thrilling Trip

Although it was no end exciting, Miss Phoebe Lewis (left) and her sister, Volinda Lewis, are "glad to be back" from their trip abroad. The girls were two of the 400 extra passengers aboard the Ile de France when she docked early this week. What with their cots in the ballroom, blackouts and life-boat drills, the girls spent several sleepless nights during the crossing. They had been summering in Italy, where they lived with an Italian family, and both returned with a "working" knowledge of Italian. Linda graduated from Vassar in June and Phoebe will re-enter Holton-Arms this year. They are the daughters of Interstate Commerce Commissioner Ernest Lewis and Mrs. Lewis

Eleanor Golden Will Be Bride

Mrs. Frank Golden, of 1801 Sixteenth street, has announced that the marriage of her daughter, Miss Eleanor Golden, to Francis C. Brooke will take place tomorrow at the home of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Burton, 2029 Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. Burton will be matron of honor, and Mr. Brooke will have his brother, Richard Brooke, as best man. Miss Golden attended preparatory schools in Boston and is a graduate of Smith College. She is the daughter of the late Frank Golden, a business executive of Nevada. Mr. Brooke is the son of Mrs. James V. Brooke and is a practicing attorney here.

Beth Thompson, Sister Leave Party Like Cinderellas

Because of doctor's orders, Miss Beth Thompson and her sister, Miss Mary Dora Thompson, had to leave, like Cinderella, promptly at midnight at the party given in honor of the former last night by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Thompson, Jr. Both the Misses Thompson have had colds this week, and as Miss Beth Thompson's marriage to Garfield Swift takes place tomorrow, they are doing all they can to get rid of the germs.

Mrs. Thompson is a sister-in-law of the prospective bride, and she, her husband, and Miss Mary Dora Thompson, will be among the attendants. The party last night was held in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson on Connecticut avenue.

The guests were Mr. Swift, William Sheldon, Mr. and Mrs. John Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. Ford Menick and Mr. and Mrs. I. William Hill.

Mrs. Murphy To Entertain

Mrs. Frank Murphy will entertain at luncheon today at her home in Massachusetts Avenue Park in honor of Mrs. Robert D. Offer, who with her husband, Lieut. Offer, is visiting her parents, Judge Leigh L. Nettleton, and Mrs. Nettleton, here.

Lieut. and Mrs. Offer arrived in Washington Wednesday evening after spending a week in New York, where they were the house guests of Mrs. Margaret Brinkley. While there they visited the New York World's Fair. Lieut. and Mrs. Offer came to Washington from their home at Fort Benning, Ga., just before Labor Day and stayed with the Nettletons until going on to New York.

Mrs. Offer is the former Miss Frances Nettleton, and her marriage here was an important event of the summer season about a year ago. She will remain in Washington until October 1, though Lieut. Offer will leave to return to his duty in Fort Benning next Wednesday. Among the parties scheduled in honor of the young couple is a dinner to be given later in the week by Mr. and Mrs. James Wimsatt.

Louise McNutt Pledged to Thetas At Indiana U.

The number one rusher at Indiana University, Miss Louise McNutt, daughter of the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, pledged Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority at the conclusion of the "rush week" activities yesterday at Bloomington, Ind.

Miss McNutt pledged to the sorority after a whirl of gay parties in which several hundred co-eds took part.

Miss McNutt and her mother left their apartment at the Shoreham last week for Indianapolis. Mr. McNutt plans to join her there this week-end.

Justine Sampson Home After Visit

Miss Justine Sampson, daughter of Mrs. Odorne Sampson and the late Col. Sampson, has returned from a visit to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, where she was a guest of Miss Winifred Dorrance Dudley, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Roy Dudley.

Miss Dudley will come to Washington tomorrow to be the house guest of Miss Sampson for a couple of weeks until the opening of Smith College. Commander and Mrs. Dudley, who have until recently been stationed on the West Coast, were stationed in this city four years ago and have many friends here.

Mrs. James Wimsatt, the former Miss Margaret Sampson, another daughter of Mrs. Sampson, and Mr. Wimsatt have just moved into their new home at 5503 Writley road. Mrs. Wimsatt made her debut here a season or so ago, and she and Mr. Wimsatt were married in Washington early last spring.

George Clarke's Return From Cape May Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. George Clarke recently returned to their home at 16 West Kirk street, Chevy Chase, after a vacation at their summer place at Cape May.

Shortly after returning, Mrs. Clarke left again accompanied by her son, George, Jr., for Lebanon, Tenn., where he will be a student at the Capital Heights Military Academy. Mrs. Clarke is expected to be back in a few days.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Washington Junior League Will Inaugurate Class Public Speaking October 9

MAYBE IT'S BECAUSE Washington is such a speech-making town—anyway, of late there's been a regular stampede of private citizens rushing to enroll in public speaking courses.

It all started a few years ago when several wives of Senators and Representatives began learning the platform approach in order to help their husbands campaign and to be able to describe the ramifications of Washington life at meetings of the folks back home. Last winter, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. David Barry, Miss Stella Stapleton and several other members of Capital society began taking lessons, and now comes the news that the Washington Junior League will inaugurate its first class in speaking beginning October 9.

ON COMPLETION of the series of eight lessons scheduled, the students should be able to cope with any kind of an audience, for they will be taught to make four kinds of speeches: Informative, entertaining, persuasive and "courtesy." In charge of operations is Mrs. Hugh Butler, who has been initiating the wives of members of Congress in this venture.

The league class will be no place for the timid, as each member will be required to speak once at every session. In addition, radio and telephone technique, together with the handling of press relations, will be studied. The members will make voice recordings to give each learner the opportunity to hear herself as others hear her. They will also concentrate on remembering what face goes with what name, and will be taught good platform attire, whatever that may be.

Organizer of the class is Mrs. C. Houland Chase, education chairman of the Washington League. Lessons will be held at the modern clubhouse on Massachusetts avenue.

Ernest Warren is the league's new director of publicity this year, but says wistfully that she is not counting on getting any help at the job from her newspaperman husband.

NOBODY IS LOOKING forward to the coming football season with greater glee than Washington's No. 1 fan, Rear Admiral Emory Land, hard-working chairman of the Maritime Commission. Not only is he a regular spectator, but he is also in great demand as a referee, and is a familiar figure on the gridiron at Yale, Harvard, Columbia and Dartmouth. While on sea duty he coached the football team of the U. S. S. Oregon, which won the championship of the Asiatic Fleet. Admiral Land was once a great player himself, and in the famous 1900 contest with the Army, when he was at the Naval Academy, in true movie fashion picked up a blocked kick and made a touchdown in the closing minutes of the game, just when it seemed Army had all in the bag.

Another football fan is Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the late Secretary of the Navy. In recent years scarcely an autumn Saturday went by that she did not fill her car full of friends and drive over to Baltimore or Annapolis to see the Navy team play. Mrs. Swanson, who is one of those rare women who follow the game intelligently, is now at her home on R street.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring are ardent footballers. Attorney General Frank Murphy enjoys the game, and so does Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg. The most enthusiastic sports lover of all was the late Viscount "Pete" de Sibir, a Yale graduate who every other year, when his team played Princeton at Princeton, organized a special train full of friends and went up for the day.

NOW THAT families in the Massachusetts avenue section are beginning to drift back to town, the little park at nearby Sheridan Circle is getting terribly exclusive again. The neighborhood nursemaids gather there every afternoon with their little charges, and no clogger group exists in Washington. In fact, the sad tale is told of an unfashionable maid from nearby Q street who tried to muscle in the other day and was practically elbowed right out of the park.

A SPECIAL TRAIN, packed with horse lovers, will leave Washington tomorrow for the Foxcatcher National Cup Steeplechase to be held at Fair Hills, Del. There will be a dance tomorrow night at the Wilmington County Club, when pink coats will be in order. Among the guests for the event are Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicio, who recently returned from Rehoboth. The course is one of the largest in the country, and many of the jumps—all are brush—are over 6 feet.

Harold Hinton accompanied the officials who are en route to the Pan-American Conference to begin September 21 in Panama. Mrs. Hinton is expected back this week-end from Rehoboth, where she spent the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Wilkie, of Madison, Wis., are at the Hay-Adams House.

Miss Helen Bloedorn, daughter of Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn and Mrs. May Howard Bloedorn, left Wednesday for New York and Montclair, N. J., where she will spend several days. While in New York she will visit the World's Fair and in Montclair she will be the guest of Mrs. Frank R. Pentlarge. Shortly after her return, she will enroll at National University Law School.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gewirtz announce that the confirmation of their son, Bernard Samuel, will take place tomorrow at 10 m. at Adas Israel Synagogue. They will be at home in honor of the event on Sunday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock at their residence, 3920 Ingomar street, Chevy Chase.

Dr. and Mrs. C. Corbin Yancey,

Rep. Dempsey's Daughter Wed To Mr. McNeill

Ceremony Held in Santa Fe; Couple to Live in Carlsbad, N. Mex.

Striking a new style note with a black and white motif, Miss Kathryn Muriel Dempsey, daughter of Representative John J. Dempsey and the late Mrs. Dempsey, was married last night in Santa Fe, N. Mex., to David McNeill, of Santa Fe. Mr. McNeill is the son of Judge and Mrs. Corbin A. McNeill, of Carlyle, Ill.

The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock in the evening in the Cathedral of St. Francis of Assisi with the Rev. R. A. Gerken, bishop of Santa Fe, officiating.

Wearing traditional ivory satin, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was made on princess lines ending in a sweeping train, with a veil of illusion falling full length.

Bride's Sister Is Maid of Honor

The bride's sister, Miss Mary Dempsey, was maid of honor. Her frock of black and white velvet featured the bustle, which is being revived this season.

The remaining attendants were Mrs. Herbert C. Greer, Mrs. Homer L. Bigelow, Jr., and Miss Happy Moore, all of Santa Fe. Their gowns of black velvet with tight basques and full skirts also boasted the new bustle effect.

Miss Ann Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brooks, of Santa Fe, served as flower girl. Her frock was a miniature model of those worn by the bridesmaids.

William J. Dempsey Among Ushers

Fredolin McNeill, of St. Louis, was best man for his brother. Ushers were Corbin A. McNeill, Jr., brother of the bridegroom, of Carlyle, Ill.; William J. Dempsey, of Washington, brother of the bride; James H. Greer, of St. Louis; John Kennedy and Robert Ernst, all of Santa Fe.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the Coronado Room of La Fonda. When they return from their honeymoon the destination has been kept secret—Mr. and Mrs. McNeill will make their home in Carlsbad, N. Mex.

The bride, who is widely known in the Capital, younger sister of William J. Dempsey, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., later residing in Huntington, Long Island, until moving with her father to New Mexico ten years ago. She was educated in St. Joseph's Academy, Brentwood, Long Island, and at Georgetown College, Lakewood, N. C.

Mr. McNeill is in the staff of the sales tax division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in New Mexico.

Representative and Mrs. Dempsey, who had come to Washington for a brief stay last week, left on Saturday for Santa Fe.

Mrs. E. H. Cope To Give Luncheon For Jeanne Deming

Mrs. E. H. Cope, wife of Capt. Cope, will entertain at a luncheon today at her quarters in the Navy Yard in honor of Miss Jeanne Deming, daughter of Mrs. Raymond Deming, whose marriage to Lieut. John Munholland will take place tomorrow afternoon in Walter Reed Chapel. Capt. Cope will give the bride away.

Attending the party this afternoon will be Mrs. Deming and Mrs. John Munholland, of Monroe, La., mother of the prospective bridegroom. Also at the luncheon will be the maid of honor, Miss Barbara Cope, of New York, and the bridesmaids, Miss Emily Penn, of New York; Miss Elizabeth Ashburn, of Arlington, Va., and Miss Mary Johnson.

Earl of Peel Ends Visit in Washington

The Earl of Peel left Washington last evening after spending a few days at the Shoreham on his first sightseeing trip to the Capital. Lord Peel is the great-grandson of Robert Peel and a cousin of the late Sir Robert Peel, husband of the noted comedienne, Beatrice Lillie.

He will sail for his home in Holland Park, London, on the S. S. Washington, September 22.

Official and Residential

Mrs. Albert G. Simms, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., arrived in town yesterday for a brief visit and stopped at the Mayflower. Mrs. Simms, the former Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, is a former Washington resident, her home on Thirtieth street now being occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Miles entertained Mrs. and Mrs. Jorge Oster, of Buenos Aires, at luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower. Afterwards Mr. Miles took the visitors on a tour of the Postoffice Department, where he is solicitor general.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Wilkie, of Madison, Wis., are at the Hay-Adams House.

Miss Helen Bloedorn, daughter of Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn and Mrs. May Howard Bloedorn, left Wednesday for New York and Montclair, N. J., where she will spend several days. While in New York she will visit the World's Fair and in Montclair she will be the guest of Mrs. Frank R. Pentlarge. Shortly after her return, she will enroll at National University Law School.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Gewirtz announce that the confirmation of their son, Bernard Samuel, will take place tomorrow at 10 m. at Adas Israel Synagogue. They will be at home in honor of the event on Sunday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock at their residence, 3920 Ingomar street, Chevy Chase.

Dr. and Mrs. C. Corbin Yancey,

Society to Prolong Stays at Resorts

With trips to Europe definitely out at the moment, many Washingtonians are lingering on at summer resorts. Maj. and Mrs. Gist Blair and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, who are at Bar Harbor, plan to keep their houses there open for several weeks longer.

Mrs. Stanley Rinehart, whose former home on Massachusetts avenue is now the Swiss legation, will stay at Far View, her Bar Harbor estate, until well into October. At present the novelist has a household of guests, among them Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Rinehart, Jr., Miss Mary Rinehart 2d, and Mrs. Robert Weeks Kelley.

A Woman's New York

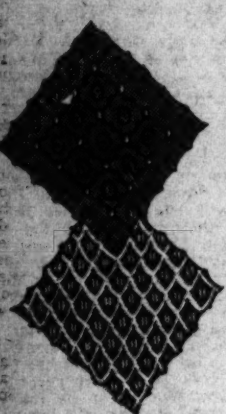

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Sept. 14. GIRL ABOUT TOWN: News from our World's Fair is in a constant state of flux, whatever that is. Attendance has boomed, but its future fate at this writing is in doubt. As far as I can learn, only one man will emerge from the Flushing Meadows with an enormous bankroll, and that is the minute maestro, Mr. Billy Rose, whose water show, "The Aquascope," fills the 10,000-seat theater with monotonous regularity.

Jerome Kern, the great light opera composer of such pieces as "Show Boat," is coming back to Broadway after years in Hollywood. This fall he will be with us with a show called "Very Warm for May"—a nice title. No, big stars, perhaps, but some able youngsters. This name reminds me of Belle Cantor, in Hollywood, where there is apt to be a bit of heat at noon. She wants to do a book called "But It's Always Cool in the Evening." May she have strength and the will to do the same.

I HEAR FROM PARIS, at first hand, that patriotism may have something to do with the fall's hair-do's. The bonneted girl who symbolizes the French revolution of some 100 years ago has her locks pictured high on top, and falling very low over the shoulders. This, naturally, is merely a rumor. Probably it will be hair up, hair down, each girl to her own choice. Paris, as far as the hair goes, can go fly a kite. We pay practically no attention.

This Young Man Doesn't Drink or Smoke; He Dances Badly; but He Gets By and Has a Good Time

MUST A YOUNG MAN'S LIFE be a "living hell" of loneliness, simply because he doesn't drink, smoke, dance, kiss girls or go to parties? That question was discussed in this space on September 12, at which time the opinions of young persons between the ages of 18 and 25 were invited. The resultant response is so unexpectedly large as to make it impossible to publish all letters received, but sample comments are submitted herewith. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The lament of "Young Man" can only strike me as odd. Having passed his age only a few years ago with the same "handicaps" to which he attributes his unpopularity—but without suffering any marked degree of unpopularity myself—I must agree with you in attributing his difficulty to other causes. A person can, I think, be too greedy for popularity. Most of us ought to be satisfied if we are not repugnant.

Like "Young Man," I do not smoke or drink, am an indifferent dancer, etc., but unlike him, I have never had any cause to feel that I am "paying" for these "virtues" with unpopularity. I was probably spared that ignominy by reason of the fact that I was able to have a good time, even so. As years passed, there was a reasonable accumulation of friends. I hold club memberships and have been elected to office, now and again.

"Young Man" is antisocial. Certainly he seems to find a lot of reasons for disliking people. His letter has a few aspects of petty despotism. He says, "I have searched for months for a girl who dislikes dancing, smoking, parties and the like." He is not looking for a girl who shares his likes, if any, but for one who shares his dislikes. Isn't that a peculiar basis for association?

"I hoped to find," he says, "a girl who enjoys the simpler things of life." What "simpler things" can HE be enjoying if he can say, as he does say, that "my life is a living hell from day to day." He doesn't enjoy anything at all, but wants a girl who will share his dislikes. His "failure on every front" is, therefore, a compliment to all the people he meets.

Why should he make a standard of his "dislikes"? He should be able to adopt some positive standards—some "likes"—without deserting his "dislikes." However, if he has nothing but "dislikes" as standards, there are actually places where he can make friends on that basis. There is the Anti-Saloon League, also the Anti-Cigarette League. If there is an Anti-Dancing League somewhere, he may help himself to that, too.

On the girl-kissing problem, he has me stumped. I've known of occasions when a fellow would kiss a girl just to be polite, but I've never heard of a fellow being forced to kiss a girl at peril of his life. If "Young Man" will try eating hot peppers three times a day, half an hour after meals, he will hardly fail to find a girl's kiss somewhat sweet; certainly tolerable.

ANOTHER YOUNG MAN.
'All Work and No Play Makes Jack a Dull Boy'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Through the medium of your column, I wish to speak directly to "Young Man." Here goes: I see your point of view, but I also know how wrong it is. I, too, once had that "holier-than-thou" attitude; the feeling that I was right and the whole world wrong; that I stood out from the masses. Which is plain rot! Fundamentally, people are the same the world over.

Remember that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Your education in the art of playing has been sadly neglected. You don't know how to play, and if you want to learn, you must get rid of your prejudices and shed your cynicism. After all, why should others conform to your particular standards? Are they much better than anyone else's? Just what is your idea of the "simpler" enjoyments of life? What is your plan for getting the most out of life? Can you name one good reason why people should be interested in you? What do you offer? Are you interesting?

I suggest you start looking for life in this world in the people you meet, instead of looking for things to condemn. Talk to people. Find out what makes them tick. Do things to please others, for a change. There is nothing so wonderful as the feeling of being needed by some person or group of persons. Take up some outdoor sports; something to blow the cobwebs out of your mind. Personal magnetism is based on physical health. Become alive, interested in life! Success is within yourself. It can and will be yours, if you so desire. I know! BONNIE.

It's No Disgrace To Dislike Dancing

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 21 years of age, and I have pretty much the same ideas about life that "Young Man" has. I, too, like the simpler things of life—such as sports, music, art and nature. I have been able to find a few friends who feel, to a certain degree, just as I do. However, we disagree on a few things, but rather than lose their friendship, I overlook these points.

I thought your advice to "Young Man" was discouraging. There are a few people in this world who do not care for dancing and parties and he is one of the few. There is no disgrace in that and I think he should not have been told that his own clumsiness is responsible for his dislike of parties and dancing. TWENTY ONE.

Specific Suggestions For 'Young Man'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My advice to "Young Man" is to go in for athletics. Don't stick to one sport in particular. Try different sports, until you find the one you like best; the one in which you can excel. I guarantee that before long you will be meeting the kind of people you don't believe exist now.

There are other pleasures in life than drinking and dancing. This boy says he has looked in vain for a girl who dislikes dancing, smoking, parties and the like. Then let him go where these things are not done. For instance, to the miniature golf courses, the roller skating and ice skating rinks, the riding stables and bridle paths, the tennis courts, etc. He should make friends with some of the fellows who go to these places, and before long they will provide introductions to nice girls interested in the same sports. YOUNG GIRL.

William Holden Picks Campus Wardrobe

William Holden, youthful screen actor and "Golden Boy" find, is sketched above in wardrobe selections which he suggests for the college man. His jacket is a three-button herringbone tweed worn with covert slacks and a puggree-banded hat. At right are odd accessories to be worn with those same slacks. At top is a blue and white flannel slip-on with knitted waistband and crew neckline. Below is an extra jacket in camel's hair and below that wool-plaid socks from Argyle, Scotland.

'Joe College' Fads Give Way This Fall to Conservatism

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

A GOOD LOOKING and comfortably groomed young man is William Holden, the "Golden Boy" of Columbia Studios, who recently played the title role in the film of that name. In town, recently, he expressed his wardrobe preferences for the college lad of 1939.

Marshall Adams

Tastes of the curly-haired young actor-violinist-bosher for men in and out of school tend toward the conservative, rather than Joe College fads. Quietly dressed in soft tweeds and a white oxford shirt, minus any collegiate trimmings, the former South Pasadena Junior College student looked the way nine out of ten average college men would like to look.

"It's only too easy to overdo slightly collegiate fads which are expensive and become out of date almost as soon as they're in," said Mr. Holden. "Last season's high colors, novelty fabrics and unorthodox silhouettes may be all right for playboys with money to burn, but for the student on a budget, the conservative, comfortable fashions are best. Self-expression can be found in ties, socks and such things."

To aid other collegians with less practical style sense than his, we got Mr. Holden's endorsement on the entrance requirements listed below, which were worked out by a local haberdasher who recently has been outfitting youths for school.

Basic Needs

THE SUIT—A three-button, single-breasted lounge model, its plain vent back coat and pleated trousers in rough tweed.

There are heather, tan, brown, or herringbone tweeds available, looking like $85 suits but costing less than $40.

THE TOPCOAT—Must be of such good quality that it will last indefinitely and be worn with dinner clothes as well as classroom odds. A good choice would be a Scotch monotone woolen made in mysterious, smoky textures that only the Isle and Man textiles can create. And Harris tweed balmacans are just as popular as ever.

SHOES AND SOCKS—Shoes should be purchased for good looks, but mainly for wear and comfort, the wing-tipped Scotch grain ones being most practical. Socks should be of prime quality but their novelty of plaid or pattern is their chief charm for the college man.

EXTRA TROUSERS—One odd pair of covert slacks and one of English gray flannel will help stretch the basic suit into a whole wardrobe.

SHIRTS AND TIES—Shirts are best in regulation white or blue Oxford cloth. Ties may range from brilliant printed foulards to trim little woolen bow ties.

THE HAT—Anything from a corduroy pork pie to a classic self-trimmed felt, say in the new hedge green. Leslie Page, a designer, has just evolved a collegian's snap brim with triangular crown and pugger print band.

SWEATERS AND JACKETS—Should be as numerous as money permits. The pull-on sketched here is novel. The hand-stitched jacket with quilt-sized pockets is a campus must for sports and lounging.

SLEEPING WEAR—At least three pairs of broadcloth pajamas are needed plus a pair of sturdy calf slippers and a wool flannel robe that is comfortable rather than dramatic.

Fall Slip Covers Easily Made

A NEW NOTE in home furnishing—chairs in pairs. A delightful note, too, and one you can inexpensively adapt by making twin slip covers for two of your old chairs.

No matter if your "pair" isn't really a pair, it's easy to turn your chairs into twins—modern, early American or whatever style suits your living room.

For a world of tomorrow air, choose one of the ultra smart Swedish modern fabrics, say a horizontal design in ice blue, silver and coral. Make your covers in tailored style with straight skirts.

For a colonial room, dress your twins in a colorful chintz—roses buds on apple green. Use deep pleated flounces.

Of course you'll plan a friendly grouping for your pair—around a low coffee table, a fireplace, or sunny window.

And here's the way you make your slip covers—as easily as you'd stitch up a house dress. No matter what style your chair and cover, no matter what your fabric, you get a perfect professional fit by the simple pinway.

You begin by smoothing fabric over back and seat, pinning along the seams of the original upholstery. Then cut, leaving 1½ inches outside pins for seams.

Similarly, you pin and cut fabric for other sections, then pin pieces together and remove cover carefully. Basic, try on, then stitch. Add flounce or skirt last.

Our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," has diagrams and instructions for making slip covers for all types of chairs and sofas—with complete details of fitting, sewing and finishing. Explains how to estimate material, make upholstered covers, too.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York City. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Important Foods For School Lunch Basket Are Listed

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

MANY a beginning parent will be faced for the first time this year with the task of preparing a school lunch. The school may have a good cafeteria, with food at reasonable prices, but sometimes there is doubt whether sister knows just what is best to pick out, and brother is known to shirk on his fruit and vegetables, so mother will do the nutrition planning herself.

For convenience, get salt, pepper and sugar shakers, paper napkins, spoons and paper containers (much safer than glass containers), and a vacuum bottle, of course.

Give enough fruit. The young body needs lots of energy. Provide some quick energy in the form of candy or sweets and reduce the temptation to gorge on cheap candy at the little shops.

Protein, vegetables, milk, bread and fruits, and sweets—these are the staple requirements.

For some fall lunches the following are suggested:
Egg sandwiches on entire wheat bread; raspberry jam sandwich on white bread; apple and date salad; lettuce separate; celery hearts; bottle of milk in vacuum bottle; grapes; spice cakes; fudge.

Baked beans with tiny bit of chili sauce or horseradish on entire wheat bread; grated yellow cheese sandwich on white bread; fresh tomato; bottle of milk in vacuum bottle; peach; fig cookies; butter-scotch.

Cream cheese and orange honey on white bread; meat loaf on entire wheat bread; carrot ball and beet ball salad; lettuce and dressing separate; bottle of milk in vacuum bottle; fresh pear; walnut bar; minis.

Tuna fish on white bread; sliced ham on entire wheat bread; potato salad; lettuce separate; raw carrot strips; bottle of milk in vacuum bottle; plums; devil's food cake; fruit roll.

Nutritious Menus for Children Win This Week's Recipe Prizes

Adults Like Meal As Well as Young

Lamb Chops, Liver Loaf, Fish
Fillets and Rice Are Pivotal Foods;
Chocolate Malt Crunches Good Snack

By Martha Elynn,
The Post Food Editor.

EVERY MOTHER likes to picture her baby boy a full-grown, husky man with a smile and an alert, wide-awake mind, and her daughter a lovely, bright-eyed, clear-skinned, happy girl. The time to plan for all that is when the children are little. Every spoonful of the proper foods fed the tots today is building toward such goals tomorrow.

Mrs. Lawlor

In response to the theme—Wholesome Food for Children—The Post food readers followed through with suggestions not only suitable for the children, but that almost any adult would like. The following menus and recipes prove that Post food page readers know the foods that stand high in nutrition and quality.

Juvenile Perfection

Mrs. Jay Lawlor, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, Washington, D. C., submitted a winning recipe and wins the first prize of $3. The menu she suggests is one that grown-ups would find desirable yet gives splendid nourishment for children too. The following is her dinner menu and winning recipe.

Dinner Menu for Children

Pineapple and Lime Juice
Broiled Lamb Chops
Buttered Spinach
Mashed Potatoes
Bread
Baked Honey Custard
Milk

Baked Honey Custard

Scald 1 quart milk. Combine 4 eggs, slightly beaten, 1/4 cup honey and 1/4 teaspoon salt; add milk slowly, stirring until honey is thoroughly dissolved. Turn into small custard cups, place in pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, 25 to 30 minutes, or until firm. Sprinkle lightly with nutmeg. Cool.

Vitamin Special

Liver loaf is the pivotal food around which Mrs. Arthur Rhoads, 520 Elm street, Frederick, Md., plans her children's dinner menu to win an award of $2. Liver contains vitamins and iron that give it special value among meats. The following is Mrs. Rhoads' menu and recipe for making the liver loaf. This is an ideal meal for hungry, growing youngsters and for grownups, too.

Dinner Menu for Young Child

Baked Liver Loaf
Baked Potato, Grated
Carrot and Lettuce Salad Milk Sherbet
Milk
Oatmeal Hermits

Baked Liver Loaf

Wipe 1 1/2 pounds beef liver with damp cloth or wash if necessary. Cover with boiling water and let stand 10 minutes; drain. Grind with 1 slice salt pork, 1/4 inch thick, and 1 medium-size onion. Add 1/4 cup chopped parsley, 2 cups soft bread crumbs, 2 eggs slightly beaten, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper and mix thoroughly. Press into baking pan, 8x4x3 inches, and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, about 1 hour or until browned. Remove loaf to hot platter. Stir 2 tablespoons flour into drippings and brown. Add 2 cups water gradually and cook 5 minutes, stirring until thickened. Season to taste and pour over loaf. Yield: 1 loaf, 8x4x3 inches, or enough for 6 portions.

For Jack and Jill

Mrs. Mary Doyle, 3435 R street, Washington, D. C., wins a $1 award with her suggested menu of fish and other nutritious foods. Fish is a protein food used as is meat or eggs in the diet. Seafood from salt water is a valuable source of iodine. The following is Mrs. Doyle's menu and directions for baking fish fillets. Such a meal will serve two purposes—to supply essential foods for growth and energy, and at the same time make the meal attractive and appetite-appelling.

Mrs. Doyle

Baked Fish Fillets

Use fillets 1/4 to 2/3 inch thick; cut in pieces for serving or leave whole; dip in solution of 1 cup milk and 1 tablespoon of salt, roll in fine crumbs and place in greased shallow baking pan. Pour melted butter over fish and bake in very hot oven, 500 degrees, uncovered, 10

Children's Dinner Menu

Baked Fish Fillets
Scalloped Potatoes
Sliced Tomatoes
Butter
Siring Beans
Whole Wheat Bread
Prune Whip
Sponge Cake
Milk

Honey Custard Pudding, a cup of delicious cocoa, and crisp crunchy cookies (as pictured above) are luscious versions of nutritious foods which will be hailed by hungry youngsters when they come home from school at lunch time to 15 minutes, depending upon the thickness of fish. Place on hot platter, garnish with parsley and lemon wedges, and serve with any desired sauce, suitable for children.

Lunches and Snacks

Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, 7 Belle Grove road, Brooklyn Park, Baltimore, Md., wins a $1 award with her recipe for Chocolate Malted Crunches. Mrs. Edwards writes, "This is a very nourishing cookie for school lunches or after-school snacks. It is very good food for children who tire of milk for they can get a good amount in these cookies."

Chocolate Malted Crunches

Cream 1/2 pound butter and 1 cup medium brown sugar until soft and fluffy. Add 1 egg, well-beaten and 1 teaspoon vanilla and then 1 1/2 cups cake flour, 1 level teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon and 1/4 cup chocolate malted milk powder, sifted together. The mixture will be quite stiff and the last of the dry ingredients must be worked in gradually. Finally, form into a roll and wrap in waxed paper to stand for a day in the refrigerator. When ready to bake, unwrap, cut off thin slices, and arrange on a floured cookie sheet. Brush lightly with egg white and sprinkle with finely ground nut meats. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for about 8 minutes.

Nutritious Delight

Mrs. Louis Harris, 216 Spruce avenue, Takoma Park, Md., wins a $1 award for her recipe using rice with an attractive service of spinach, peas and carrots. Here is a dish that should make a strong appeal to the child for the contrast in flavor, color and kind of food definitely influences the child's attitude toward food.

Rice With Vegetables

Cook 1 cup rice in 8 cups boiling water and 1 teaspoon salt, 15 minutes. Drain and run cold water through rice to remove starch. Return to fire, add 2 cups chicken broth and simmer until rice absorbs broth. Heap it in center of a hot platter and surround with nests of cooked chopped spinach. Fill 3 nests with buttered peas, and 3 with buttered carrots, finely chopped, or mix the two. Arrange the nests alternating the peas and carrots. The rice may be sprinkled with paprika very lightly.

Vitamin Pills A Waste if Right Food Is Eaten

Much Nourishment Is Lost Via the Sink, Say Nutritionists

A grand rush to the corner drugstore for vitamin pills to pep one up would not be necessary if the correct foods were eaten. In 1938 many millions were spent by the American public on vitamin pills. This vitamin rush would have undoubtedly been unnecessary if there hadn't been a hole in the family market basket.

It's the old story—an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Buy and eat the right foods—and cook them right, too! Vitamins and minerals are two of the essential food elements which very often get sidetracked, either never considered when making up the menu or go down the sink or into the garbage pail. Besides the waste of money in the wrong handling of foods, nourishment is lost which is needed for cooking bones, shining eyes and happy dispositions.

It's the abundance or scarcity of vitamins that often makes the difference to a person of being able to "drag along" or have "pep." According to the nutritionists plenty of vitamin (a part of what we used to call vitamin B) is needed by the body to keep the muscles in good trim and the appetite and digestive tract in good order. Thiamin and riboflavin (vitamin G) and ascorbic acid all soak out into the cooking water when you cook vegetables. That's the reason why the juice or cooking water should be used for soup or gravy. We get most of our thiamin from whole-grain cereals.

Oatmeal is a good example of a "pep" food because it is so rich in vitamin B content. It is particularly valuable not only from a nutritional standpoint, but also from an economic point of view. If you want to get this nutrition from animal foods you can find it in a good supply of pork, chicken, liver and kidneys.

Animal foods, such as lean meats, liver, kidneys, eggs, cheese and milk, furnish a generous amount of riboflavin. Any kind of milk gives a great deal of it. So eat your whole-grain cereals, the right animal foods, drink your milk—or get it into the diet in some form, if you don't want to have a poor appetite, indigestion, stunted growth, nervousness or any of the other results from the lack of this important food element.

Apples Will Fit Into Any Meal

Apples are ripe plenty. They will fit into any meal, from the baked apple for breakfast—or apple rings with sausages; the tartness of the apples makes a pleasing flavor contrast with the blandness of pork, whether the apples are baked, fried, broiled, glazed or served in fancy circles, centered with nuts, raisins, or candied cherries.

Apples and vegetables combine pleasingly. Scalloped apples and sweet potatoes, scalloped apples and cabbage, fried apples and carrots, fried apples and onions are but a few of the combinations.

Salads, too, are an interesting way of using apples. Blushing apple salad, Waldorf salad, apple and cabbage salad, fruit salad and cider gelatin are all very flavory.

Peaches Make Fine Shortcake

If late summer brought no other fruit than peaches there would be plenty of appetizing ways to serve them so they would not become monotonous. Dumplings, deep-dish pies, shortcake and ice cream are but a few of the treats to be made from peaches. Preserves and pickled peaches, too, are general favorites. Try a shortcake made from the following recipe.

Sift 2 cups flour, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 4 teaspoons baking powder and work in 1/3 cup shortening until it reaches the consistency of coarse meal. Combine 1 well-beaten egg with 2/3 cup milk and add to the dry ingredients, stirring until well blended. Turn out on a floured surface and knead lightly. Divide dough into halves and pat out each to fit an 8-inch layer pan. Place one round in pan, brush with melted butter and top with second half. Brush top with melted butter. Bake in moderate oven, 425 degrees, for 25 minutes.

Barbecue Is Good Dish For a Party

Plenty of Hot Sauce And Buttered Buns Should Be Served in Dude Ranch Feast

By Martha Elynn

The Post Food Editor.
A DUDE RANCH party is one way to insure a gay evening. With summer on the wane and vacationers returning home, get-togethers are in vogue. One is to greet old pals and to hail in the neighborhood friends with hearty Western hospitality. Suggest that you and your guests come in whatever version of Wild West regalia they can manage. Even if they have to borrow a "sombbrero" or Junior's ten-gallon cowboy hat. Perhaps you can invest in a big red kerchief, or carry a make-believe "six-shooter" in an open holster strapped to the hip with a cartridge belt, a pair of "chaps," or long-shanked spurs with rowels to jingle.

Tiny caresses which you can buy for 10 cents will lend Western atmosphere. Gay plaid lines will also give a festive note. Informality should be the keynote of the party. And social ice-breaking—if there is any needed—won't be a problem if you set up a "chuck wagon" or a sandwich bar, and let the guests assemble their own sandwiches and help themselves to the other food.

Barbecued meat—beef or veal—is a cowboy special that's easy to cook for a crowd. A large platter of meat with a bowl of barbecue sauce nearby is the starting point. There is nothing more insipid than a lukewarm sauce, so serve it in a container that will keep it hot. A good-looking stain-resistant enamel double boiler will not be out of place on the "chuck wagon." Of course there must be plenty of hot buttered buns for the sandwiches.

Since the barbecue began spreading beyond its native habitat, there has been no stopping it, and now anything cooked with barbecue sauce may bear its name. Recipes vary as distance widens from the Mexican border, but all have flavor, and plenty of it. The following recipe for a good hot one is taken from the recently released book, "Soups, Sauces and Gravies," by Cora, Rose and Bob Brown, published by J. B. Lippincott Co.

Barbecue Sauce
Mix together and heat 1 cup of stock or water, 1/4 cup vinegar, 1/2 cup butter, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon chili powder, 1/2 teaspoon cayenne, 1 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire, 1/4 teaspoon Tabasco, 1/4 cup minced onion and 1 garlic clove, minced.

A sauce less hot but perhaps more savory than the above is one made by mixing together and heating 1 cup stock or water, 3 tablespoons vinegar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon mustard, 4 tablespoons butter, 1/2 lemon, cut fine, 5 tablespoons catsup, 5 tablespoons Worcestershire, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 1/2 teaspoon cayenne, 1/4 cup minced onion, and 1 garlic clove, minced.

Roasting ears are at their best just now. Serve them steamed in hot water, and suggest that you boil the corn in milk. Be sure to have fresh corn with the garden dew still on it, if possible. And don't boil it more than 10 minutes. Churn on the cob calls for plenty of sweet butter, too.

A big crock or bowl of vegetable salad, tossed and dressed with

The First Roundup

A Dude Ranch Party may be the way you will want to send off summer in a burst of flavor. In many States iced coffee is a 12-month beverage. In others the frosty sip relinquishes its honored spot to the hot and aromatic brew, come the turn of the leaves. Either way makes a splendid beverage to serve with the barbecued sandwiches and roast-ear ears as shown in the above photograph.

French dressing, will round out the main part of the meal. Then on to dessert. Fruit pies seem to have resulted through grim necessity. At a time when George Washington's larder was sorely tried, he wrote a letter to warn some friends whom he had invited to dine with him about what they would be likely to eat. He wrote: "Of late the cook has had the surprising sagacity to discover that apples will make 'pies,' and it's a question, if in the violence of his efforts, we do not get one of apples, instead of having both of beef-steaks." Regardless of the origin of apple pie, it is now considered a superlative dessert. Serve it with some snappy cheese.

There is a novel Mexican style thirst quencher that will give the party an added note—Ranchers' Coffee—made with decaffeinated coffee. You can encourage everyone to drink extra cups of this beverage without considering sleeping problems. Here's how you make it.

Ranchers' Coffee
Add 4 tablespoons ground decaffeinated coffee, 8 cloves, one 4-inch piece stick cinnamon and a dash of salt to 4 cups of milk, and heat in double boiler until milk is scalded. Strain and return to double boiler. Add 1 square unsweetened chocolate cut in pieces and heat until chocolate is melted. Beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Combine 1/2 cup sugar with 1 tablespoon flour; add gradually to chocolate mixture and cook until thickened, stirring constantly; then continue cooking 5 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Cool slightly, pour over 1 egg, well beaten, and blend. Chill. Pour over cracked ice in tall glass. Top with whipped cream, if desired. Makes 1 quart.

If hot coffee is the order, remember there are a few coffee commands. Only fresh coffee will give full body, richness, aroma and good taste. This is possible with the excellent commandments. Only fresh coffee receives the coffee. Remember, too, a coffee pot less than spotless means a stale taste to the brew. Scald the pot before using. Use only freshly drawn water. Always use coffee and water exactly to obtain the same strength each time, regardless of the version you like.

Holding Goodness Of Fruits in Pies Requires a Knack

We don't imprison blackbirds nowadays to make pies fit for kings, but the luscious fruits of summer—cherries, blueberries, peaches. And there's quite a trick in holding these fruits between crusts without losing their juice. Quick-cooking tapioca is an ideal thickener for fruit pies, for it gives the juices just enough solidity to keep it from running away, but not enough to make it sticky and pasty. It's the easiest thing imaginable to use, too, and never gets lumpy.

Fruit Fruit Pies

For rhubarb, plum, grape, cherry, strawberry, raspberry, blackberry, blueberry or huckleberry pie: Combine 3/4 cups prepared fruit, 1 1/4 to 2 1/4 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, 1 to 1 1/4 cups sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon melted butter. Let stand 15 minutes, or while pastry is being made. Use as filling for 9-inch pie.

Peach Meringue Pie
Combine 2 tablespoons tapioca, 1 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 4 cups sliced fresh peaches and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Let stand for 15 minutes, or while pastry is being made. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry rolled to 1/4-inch thickness, allowing pastry to extend 1 inch beyond edge. Fit loosely on plate. Fold edge back to form standing rim and flute with fingers. Fill with peach mixture. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees for 15 minutes; reduce heat to moderate heat, 350 degrees and continue baking for 15 minutes. Beat 2 egg whites until foamy, add 4 tablespoons sugar—2 tablespoons at a time—beating after each addition until sugar is thoroughly blended. After all sugar is added, continue beating until mixture will stand in peaks. Pile lightly on hot filling and bake 15 minutes, or until delicately browned.

Corn Flake Dream Bars Truly Distinctive

A truly distinctive cookie recipe is something worth seeking, then keeping. Here it is without the hunting, and you will want to clip it for your recipe file. It is Corn Flake Dream Bars, to be used at home or afield.

Corn Flake Dream Bars

Cream 1/4 cup butter and 1/4 cup brown sugar thoroughly, add 1 cup flour and blend well. Press mixture in bottom of shallow baking pan. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 15 minutes, or until delicately browned. Beat 2 eggs well and add 1 cup brown sugar gradually and continue beating until mixture is light and fluffy. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup shredded coconut, 1 cup corn flakes and 1 cup chopped nut meats. Mix well. Drop by spoonfuls on top of previously baked crust and spread evenly. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, about 25 minutes. Remove from pan and cut into squares while warm. Yield is 40 1 1/4-inch squares.

Novel Place Cards

Hollywood, Calif.—At their first dinner party Wayne and Bubbles Morris conceived the idea of using miniature Chinese masks, touched up to caricature their guests, as place cards. Names were behind the masks for people who did not recognize themselves.

Loaf of Bread May Function In Many Roles

Basis for Appetizers, Pie Crust, Soups Bites and Toast

A loaf of bread, standing sedate and solemn on a round or square plate, is a grand holder for appetizer service. Trim the crust from the bread, brush with melted butter and brown in oven.

Among the appetizers you can serve on toothpicks, none taste looser on plates. Fold edge back to form standing rim and flute with fingers. Fill with peach mixture. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees for 15 minutes; reduce heat to moderate heat, 350 degrees and continue baking for 15 minutes. Beat 2 egg whites until foamy, add 4 tablespoons sugar—2 tablespoons at a time—beating after each addition until sugar is thoroughly blended. After all sugar is added, continue beating until mixture will stand in peaks. Pile lightly on hot filling and bake 15 minutes, or until delicately browned.

Stuffed Bacon Rolls

Combine 2 cups soft bread crumbs, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 2 tablespoons chopped parsley, 1/4 cup chopped cooking apples, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, 1 egg and 1/4 cup milk. Divide into 16 portions and shape into small rolls. Cut 8 slices of bacon in half crosswise and wrap a half slice around each roll. Secure with toothpicks. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 35 minutes, until bacon is cooked and brown. Stick the toothpicks into the toasted loaf of bread and serve.

Bread Crumb Pie Crust

Bread crumbs make excellent pie crust. It's so easy, so quick and so failure-proof. Here's how you make the crumb crust. Soften 1/4 pound butter and rub into 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs, mixing thoroughly. Pat the mixture firmly against the bottom and sides of a well-buttered 8-inch pie pan. Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees, for 15 minutes.

Crunchy Soup Bites

Something crisp, something crunchy, adds an extra zip to soup. Make croutons by cutting bread in cubes or in tiny shapes with garnish cutters, then parch dry and brown in the oven, or saute in butter, or fry in deep fat.

Cheese Toast

Cheese toast belongs to onion soup, and it's a pleasant touch with other hearty soups, too. To make it, cut rounds of toast with a 3-inch cookie cutter. Fill oven-proof soup bowls with steaming hot onion soup. Put toast rounds on top, sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese. Run the broiler until the cheese browns. Sprinkle with more cheese and serve at once.

The Propaganda Girls

I.
"You aren't going to wear your new hat?"
"Yes, why not?"
"The paper says 'rain.'"
"Oh that's just the propaganda of the umbrella manufacturers."
"But this is from the weather bureau."
"Oh well, I had it on good authority—I'm not at liberty to state the source—but anyway, I understand the weather bureau's honeycombed with representatives of the mosquito interests. Besides—I WANT to wear my new hat."

II.
"I'd love that peach shortcake with whipped cream."
"Go ahead and take it."
"No, it has too many calories."
"Oh say, there's nothing to calories any more. They're just propaganda against the sugar interests."
"You don't mean it?"
"Yes! People are just waking up. Another thing, they've exposed vitamins."

"No!"
"Yes! It seems they were just a plot of the carrot growers."
"I can't believe that."
"Well, did you ever see a vitamin?"
"No."
"Then how do you know they exist?"
"I guess you're right. Waiter! Take back this vegetable plate!"

III.
"Have you done your exercises?"
"I'm not doing them any more."
"Why not?"
"I understand they're all propaganda against the corset people."
"Can you prove that?"
"No, but I got it from a friend of mine whose husband's cousin knows a woman whose maid's husband runs an elevator in the State Department."

"Why should the State Department want to help the corset people?"
"To keep the steel interests from building battleships, I suppose."

IV.
"I feel so depressed about the war."
"What war?"
"The war in Europe."
"Who said there was a war in Europe?"

"Well—it's all in the papers and on the radio."
"Have you seen any fighting?"
"No, but—"
"Have you heard any bombs fall?"
"No, but other people have."
"Oh, but you can't believe anything you hear any more."
"But I've seen pictures."
"You can't believe anything you see. Stick to facts."
"Yes, but—"
"Let me tell you something—I don't believe there is any war."
"What?"
"No, it's all propaganda."
"Whose propaganda?"
"I don't know just whose. But somebody's."

"Well—maybe so. Say, let's go out and lie on the sand awhile."
"All right, if we can find any deep enough."

New Cook Book Covers Gravies, Soups and Sauces

Soups, sauces and gravies are the hallmarks of a good cook. On the whole they are easy to make and to excel in them it is only necessary to master a few basic recipes. Cora, Rose and Bob Brown in their new book—"Soups, Sauces and Gravies"—tell how to make a new soup for every day; the ways to vary the two "mother sauces," the white and brown; and their many interpretations of good gravies.

This book, which has been recently released by the Lippincott Publishing Co., will be hailed with delight by amateur and experienced cooks alike because the Browns completely cover these three subjects in a charming style that assures a cook book that is different.

The Browns say that sour cream is a sauce in itself, rich enough to take the place of olive oil and other fats, and sufficiently acid to supply its own piquance. They have developed a recipe for squash with sour cream which uses sour cream as an ingredient.

Summer Squash with Dill Sauce

Peel and cut a long green squash in julienne strips. There should be 1 1/2 pints. Fry 1 small chopped onion and 1 tablespoon chopped dill in 2 tablespoons butter, but do not let them brown. Add 1 1/4 cups boiling water and the squash and bring to boiling point. Blend 1 tablespoon flour with a little cream. Add 1 cup sour cream. Put into squash a little at a time, shaking pan to mix. Season with salt and pepper and allow to simmer until squash is done.

The same sauce can be made with chopped parsley, using 2 tablespoons, and it is good for finishing the cooking of parboiled potatoes or carrot balls.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

REMEMBER when we used to go on a diet and hope for the best—and the weight came off at the wrong places! That gave us the proper respect for exercises. Now that exercise is firmly established in the Fifth Avenue beauty salons, it is considered a most important part of your beauty program.

Would you like to know the secrets behind these expensive streamlining courses? There is nothing they teach that cannot be applied at home. But to slim down in the right spots, you have to know which exercise movements involve specific sets of muscles. That's where kinesiology comes in. Sounds formidable, but it's the science behind the daily dozen. It helps you to reach the figure-controlling muscles, and from then on, streamlining is easy.

The specific exercises will all be worked out for you, of course, but first know the positions from which to start and the exact exercise movements which tone the lazy muscles. Then you will know what you are doing, and why.

Start With the Arms

Let's start with the arm muscles. As you grow older they get flabby. You can't quite understand that, because you use your arms all day long. But there's the catch! Ordinary arm movements use only the front muscles, the biceps and the brachialis anticus.

The muscles on the backs of the upper arms, which, by the way, are called the triceps, are used very little, and the backs of the arms take on pendulous fat—and you have to put sleeves in your evening gown! Here's where you apply a little kinesiology. By taking special exercises with the arms held at shoulder level, and thrusting them straight out in front of the body, or pushing against resistance with the arms, chest level, you can tighten the flesh on the upper arms, or strengthen weak ones.

Try it: Bring your arms up to shoulder level and thrust one arm out in front of the body. Now, with the other hand, feel how this tightens the flesh on the back of the arm. All arm exercises should be worked out using these positions and movements.

Muscles Support Breasts

Luckily for us, the muscular network of the arms and chest is interrelated, so the same type of exercises which beautify the upper arms helps to strengthen the pectoral muscles which support the bust. The breasts are glands, not muscles, but they are supported by muscles—the powerful pectorals—which spread fanwise across the chest and insert into the upper arms.

British Film Star Notes Contrast in War Views

Madeleine Carroll Ran U-Boat Gauntlet;
Vaudeville Creeps Out Into the Suburbs;
This, That and the Other About the Theater

ARRIVING LATE at a Madeleine Carroll press interview and leaving early is like being the last fly to hear about a drop of honey. You fight your way through a swarm of your fellows laying down a buzzing barrage of questions only to find that there is little left for you in the way of columnar nourishment.

So we arrived at the Carlton Hotel promptly at 3 yesterday afternoon and were in at the beginning of the radiant Miss Carroll's interesting revelations of her views on a number of timely topics, ranging from the war to the cinema and back again.

Having been in Paris at the time war was declared, and having only arrived back in America a week ago last Tuesday, aboard the S. S. Champlain, with what she describes as a "refugee's luggage," the European embroilment, of course, is uppermost in her mind. Most vivid, one gathers, is the contrast between the American's present emotional point of view and the matter-of-fact attitude of those on the other side who already are in the imbroglio up to their figurative ears. There is less hysteria in France and England than there is in America's reaction, according to Miss Carroll. She should know, because one of her last acts before sailing for this country was to turn over her home, 26 miles southwest of Paris, as a refuge for children. It was all taken quite as a matter of course by those who found hospice on her estate. The Western powers simply have reached the point where they feel a onerous job has to be done and have set about doing it with the calm and determination that anyone feels in tackling a distasteful chore.

Always a little nervous about air travel, the vivacious and acutely intelligent Miss Carroll now is cured of that fear. The trip over on the Champlain did that. Learning of the Athens disaster four days out, the fear of submarine attack was so intense that flying in a peaceful country now seems the utmost in safety.

Country now seems the utmost in safety. So after a day or two in New York, the blonde star of screen and radio flew to Hollywood, arriving there last Friday, left again by plane Sunday, arrived here on Wednesday and today is flying on to New York for the premiere of her latest picture, "Honey Moon in Bali," in which Fred MacMurray is co-star. In a moment of weakness, she confessed yesterday that she thought she would return to Hollywood for the making of "Safari" on a nice, comfortable train where one needn't strap herself in.

The present state of the American mind was amusingly demonstrated to Miss Carroll upon her arrival at the Washington Airport. The first questions asked were as to the nature of her "mission" to the National Capital. The implication seemed to be that she either was a 1939 Mata Hari or a lobbyist having something important to perform in connection with the amendment of the present neutrality law for which the President has called an extra session of Congress for next week. Her real purpose in being here, of course, was to wind up a well-earned vacation as the guest of friends.

Even at that, her generous equipment for either of the other two roles is by no means negligible. Madeleine Carroll's personality is one that is not laughed off lightly. Getting a little closer to her own individual concerns, Miss Carroll feels that after the first impact of the outbreak of the war has worn off, the American cinema, radio and all forms of amusement will be in for a boom. That would be no more than a repetition of the history of 1914-1918. At present, however, there is a bit of chaos in some of the West Coast amusement enterprises. The war has provided an excuse for readjustments of which in some quarters, she feels, advantage will be taken. With her screen future secure—barring unforeseen circumstances and developments—it is to be hoped that The Circle program will be resumed on the air also. Miss Carroll, Larry Tibbets, Groucho Marx and the rest gave us some of the merriest hours we ever have enjoyed before the old family loudspeaker—and, being a bachelor, I do not mean the wife!

"Honey Moon in Bali," according to reports of previews coming in from all sides, bids fair to be quite a picture. Its feminine star is particularly pleased because most of its zippiest lines were left in. And she calls attention, too, to a corking performance contributed to the picture by Carolyn Lee. Miss Lee is 4½ years old. But Miss Lee, take it from Miss Carroll, put everybody in his place on the set from stars and director to producer. She said everything her adult associates always had wanted to say but never had quite had the nerve! Miss Lee also will attend the New York premiere—with her arm in a sling and her shoulder in bandages as the result of a recent motor car accident. But you know these old troupers—the show must go on!

The midcity combination policy of feature motion pictures and living stage entertainment is gradually seeping out into the residential and suburban sections of the Capital. For several weeks now, Managing Director Charlie Olive has been making a success of stage shows at his Atlas Theater, 1331 H street northeast, and in the near future Sidney B. Lust will inaugurate a similar innovation at the Bethesda Theater—formerly the Boro-out Rockville pike way. These veteran showmen both are booking "big time" acts for the edification of their customers. And the customers are eating it up, if the Atlas is any criterion.

Director August King-Smith, of the King-Smith Playhouse, passes along the word that rights for the Washington performance of "Family Portrait" by Lenore Coffee and William Joyce Cowen, have been secured and that this drama of the life and works of Jesus will be presented as the opening attraction of the new season. It was a Broadway success last season, with Judith Anderson as star. Martha Nash will be seen in the role of Mary, the mother of Jesus, in the Washington production. Keinert Wolff will direct.

More new pictures will be on view in the downtown, first-run area today than on any "opening day" in the past several weeks. Apropos of nothing, of course, and not that it matters to anyone except those who like to see the new ones while they are "hot." The greatest heat, needless to say, is being turned on at the Capitol tonight for the world premiere of "Thunder Afloat" starring Wallace Beery and dealing with the United States "splinter fleet" in the first World War.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif. Sept. 14.—Now that Bill MacGuire has finished "Lillian Russell," Zanuck is looking madly for someone to play the part. Why not Irene Dunne in a blonde wig? She can sing, too. Did you know Lillian was one of the first Christian Scientists and remained one up to the end? The chorus girls in her company called her "Mother Lillian." When one of them got a diamond bracelet in a bunch of posies (wish someone would revive that charming custom), they were told the facts of life before they went out to supper with sender. She'd end up by saying, with a twinkle: "I might do it myself. But I don't recommend it."

Now that Priscilla Lane wants to know what songs she should sing in "The Roaring Twenties" here's my list: "Avalon" because that's the year we won the right to vote—not that we've done much about it. "April Showers"—then women paid as much for cosmetics as for cigarettes, still do. "Say It With Music"—Valentino did that for us in "The Four Horsemen." "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More," because champagne was $25 a quart and Scotch $20. "All Alone" which started both Ginger Rogers and George Raft doing the Charleston. "Moonlight and Roses" as popular as ever. And "Am I Blue" sang Al Smith when Hoover defeated him for presidency. Priscilla, sing 'em all—and I'll be happy.

Stu Erwin in "The Simple Life" went through a door and slammed it, didn't stay shut, so he slammed it again. "No," said the director, "This is a B picture—we only allow one slam. That is, until the preview."

Since "Beau Geste" Brian Donlevy has had two ups in salary. Yes, one good part did it!

Dick Carlson and Hugh Herbert go into "Little Accident" with baby Sandy. It will be no accident if the baby comes out shouting: "Woo, woo."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots
—Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service

Hollywood, Sept. 14.—Here is a piece of hot news, right off the grid-die. Katharine Cornell's play, "No Time For Comedy," has just been purchased for a long time S. N. Behrman, the author, held out for a price which the studios held prohibitive, but I am reliably informed. Warners paid $75,000 instead of $100,000 originally demanded.

Bette saw the play with Miss Cornell and Laurence Oliver in the East and at once wired Warners that she would love to bring it to the screen. It's certainly a complete departure for Bette—a smart comedy—but if Cornell can do it, so can she. Bette, of course, will be seen in the role of the actress, while it is more than likely George Brent will draw Oliver's part of her play-wright husband, who wandered from his bedside.

Loretta Young better not disappoint Harry Edington, for unless he can get her to play in Vicki Baum's new unpublished novel, he won't make the picture. That's what I call popularity, but Harry tells me that if Miss Baum's story, "One Girl Out of Six," had been written with Loretta in mind, it couldn't fit her more perfectly. Unless there's a last-minute slip, La Young will put her name on an Edington contract tomorrow. Speaking of Loretta—she has certainly deserted the night clubs lately. One of the most popular girls in town, she used to be seen out almost every night with either Jimmy Stewart, Franchot Tone or David Niven. No, she isn't pulling a Garbo—but Loretta would like to put on a couple of extra pounds and complete rest is the only way to do it.

For many years Samuel Goldwyn has tried hard to live up to George Bernard Shaw's famed remark "I am a business man interested only in money, while you are interested in art." But no more. From now

Coming GINGER ROGERS in "FIFTH AVENUE GIRL"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

PERSISTENCE: John Gunther is telling this story to his colleagues in Europe: Sixteen years ago Eamon de Valera addressed a street-corner meeting in Innis, Ireland. . . British officials interrupted that speech by arresting De Valera, who then was sentenced to imprisonment for one year. . . When he had served that jail term De Valera immediately returned to that same street corner in Innis, ascended the speaker's stand and began: "Well, as I was saying. . ."

CHANCE: The owner of one of the gambling ships which had anchored off the coast near Hollywood approached Fannie Brice and suggested that she invest in his enterprise. . . "The odds are all with us," he propositioned. "Look at these figures. You couldn't lose." . . Miss Brice, however, evinced no interest. . . "But you can't lose," the gambler insisted. "You can make from $1,000 a week up." . . "In the first place I wouldn't want to back any gambling enterprise," Miss Brice explained. "And, secondly, it would look awfully funny on my income-tax return if it read: 'Income—Gambling Boat, $1,000. . . Baby Snooks, $5,000.'"

DEFEAT: The National Association of Confectioners had completed all arrangements for the celebration of a "Sweetheart Day" throughout the country next month. . . Its purpose was to promote the sale of candy and other such delicacies. . . The association, however, canceled "Sweetheart Day" and its related promotion of sweets—because of the new high prices of sugar.

AMITY: Until two weeks ago Lew Brown, the producer of "Yodel Boy," was distressed at the possibility of having to close his show because of the threatened strike induced by the activities of George Brown, head of the IATSE. . . The current stock market boom now has furnished Lew with new enthusiasms, and this week he's been providing the members of his cast with tips on the market. . . "The man who gave me the tip guaranteeing they absolutely guaranteed them," Lew assured. . . "Who is he?" Brown was asked. . . He whispered: "George Brown—the man who almost wrecked 'Yodel Boy.'"

ENTERPRISE: The city administration officials have collected 62,000 signatures on the petition to abolish the county offices of Sheriff and Register. Only 50,000 such signatures are required by law. . . The Democratic machines in every county now are checking all those signatures and soon will charge that 35,000 of them are irregular—because election districts were entered incorrectly, because the signers used initials instead of their full first names and because some of the names are not those of registered voters.

CHATTER: Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, the tennis stars, have entered into a partnership. They own a French hand laundry in Manhattan. . . Nicky Blair, of the Paradise Restaurant will reopen the old Town Club on West Fifty-second street. Joe E. Lewis will be his first star there. . . Senator George, of Georgia, is seeing specialists about his eye ailment, which has taken a serious turn. . . The Franklin Book Co. has purchased from Random House the 4,000 unsold sets of President Roosevelt's book, "Public Papers and Addresses."

ROMANCE: Lew Ambers brought his home-town fiancée to his manager, Al Weil, yesterday. "Al," said the lightweight champion, "you've been setting the dates for all my matches. I want your consent for this one—and want you to set the date." . . Weil gave his blessings and set the wedding date—October 5.

ENTERPRISE: Next week Jack Dempsey will announce his association with the Baltimore Pure Rye Co., which will use the Dempsey name for one of its brands. . . McKesson, Robbins & Co. holds a contract with Dempsey, providing for the exclusive use of his name for its brand of rye. Jack informed them that he was breaking that contract. . . McKesson, Robbins protested, but finally agreed—when Jack threatened to bring suit and air the Coster-Musica story.

MEMORY: Harry K. Thaw entered the famous dining hall at the Coronado Beach Hotel near San Diego, Calif. The head waiter greeted him enthusiastically. . . "How did you know my name?" Thaw asked. . . "I was your waiter at the Madison Square Garden Roof on the night you shot Stanford White," the head waiter explained. . . Thaw then was escorted to a table and looked around the attractive room. . . "This is one of the nicest dining halls I've ever seen," he stated. . . "It should be," the head waiter told him. "It was designed by Stanford White."

Desert Town Now Richest in World

Most prosperous community in the world, it has been disclosed, was a city of tents set amidst a complete desolation in the California desert. It was Beau Geste Valley, the city reared in the heart of the sand dunes for the filming of "Beau Geste."

Six months ago, the only inhabitants were coyotes, foxes, gophers, rattlesnakes and scorpions. Later, the 450 inhabitants of Beau Geste Valley boasted a daily payroll of nearly $24,000, the average daily income of the population, from stars to laborers, being $53.33.

Weather Men Hitch Balloons To Tail of Franklin's Kite

Benjamin Franklin had the right idea when he sent up the kite, scientists attending the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics agreed yesterday as they compared notes on present-day study of thunderstorms and passed around photographs so accurate they showed electric currents playing around single raindrops.

Where Franklin used kites, present-day savants use balloons equipped to send back recordings automatically. Ready for "mass production," the balloons will make short-range weather forecasting just about perfect and lead to all sorts of discoveries covering electrical content of the atmosphere, the scientists hope.

From discussions led by Dr. F. J. W. Whipple, of the Kew Observatory in London; Dr. O. H. Glah, assistant director of the department of terrestrial magnetism, Carnegie Institution; Dr. F. J. Workman and R. E. Holzer, of the New Mexico Observatory, and others, it appeared science is far from being in the dark on thunder and lightning matters.

When electricity hits the earth in the form of lightning, they declared, it does not just crash and stop—but bounces back and comes down again much as a hard-driven rubber ball might.

Cecil Custer Elected President By Federal Employees' Union

By Scott Hart

Post Staff Writer

Atlantic City, Sept. 14.—Cecil E. Custer, finance and budget officer, Civil Service Commission, regarded generally as one of the most conservative but active persons in the American Federation of Government Employees, today was elected president of the organization.

He won over James A. Campbell, of Cincinnati, a vice president, by a vote of 15,352 to 10,000—a margin almost exactly forecast by The Post Tuesday morning. . . Campbell, whose friends had waged a determined campaign, the vote later was declared unanimous in Custer's favor and Campbell escorted the new president to the stand.

Despite his refusal to succeed himself as president, Col. Charles I. Stengle, nevertheless, was nominated by Fred G. Frazier, of the Veterans' Administration, and received a pledged vote of 402. The convention accorded the retiring president a big ovation.

The group at its final session adopted a retirement plan which proposed that the organization would work for the following program:

Optional retirement at full annuity after 30 years of service or optional retirement at proportionate annuity after 15 years. Increased annuities to less than 50 per cent of the average compensation for those receiving compensation in excess of $2,400 a year. Immediate life annuity after 15 years of service at 55. Unqualified disability retirement after 55 years of age. Joint survivorship annuity privileges for present annuitants. Continuance of persons who have recovered from disabilities on the annuity rolls until reinstated. Additional deductions from compensation if necessary, to secure more liberal retirement benefits.

Stengle May Be Retained

Col. Stengle, it was generally agreed, will be retained in the organization as legislative representative. The executive council, which begins sessions tomorrow, will take this action, it was said.

Charles T. Hoffman, of Washington, member, technical staff, Atlantic Division, Bureau of International Revenue, unanimously was elected treasurer to succeed Custer. Hoffman has been a resident of Washington for many years. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, in an address, warned the employees that a fear was growing in America over the increase of workers in government, Federal State and local. "The number of people working in government has been increasing at an alarming rate," he said.

"According to figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, 9,000,000 persons are employed in industry. There are almost one-third as many employed in government and they have been steadily increasing in number for a generation."

Fear Totalitarian Aspect

"It has become apparent to Congressmen that the public is beginning to fear a centralization of government such as exists in the totalitarian countries of Europe."

Concerning the employee outlook, he said he believed the Government should be the model for the private employer. He spoke of the world as "tottering on the brink" of a great catastrophe because men "don't have the intelligence and will to co-operate for the good of each other," and described the United States as the only nation ever founded on the proposition of peace and tolerance.

James G. Yaden, of Washington, was elected a vice president, succeeding Hoffman. Allen C. Skinner, of the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, San Antonio, Tex., became vice president in a district that previously had no such officer. Harry W. Bassett, of Chicago, succeeded Edgar M. Carpenter, of Detroit, as a vice president. All others were re-elected.

St. Paul, Minn., was selected as the 1941 convention city. The election of Custer means his early resignation from one of the top jobs in the Civil Service Commission, to assume the leadership of one of the several Federal employee organizations that campaign variously for legislation beneficial to Government workers.

Billows Ousts Somerville in U. S. Amateur This Morning

Schumacher, Doering and Ward Gain

36-Hole Semifinals Scheduled Today; Billows' Triumph Highlight of Day

By the Associated Press
Chicago, Sept. 14.—Golf's "Cinderella Kid," Little Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., produced the biggest thrill today as the semifinals bracket was completed in the forty-third national amateur golf championship at North Shore Country Club.

Billows' 6 and 5 defeat of C. Ross Somerville, Canadian star and former champion, was the most decisive victory of a quarter final program which saw the advance of three other stars from three different sections of the Nation—Don Schumacher of Dallas, Tex.; Art Doering of Chicago, and Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash.

Tomorrow, over the 36-hole route, Billows will match shots with Schumacher and Doering will battle Ward.

Five Under Par
Billows' game against Somerville was as hot as the plus 90 degree temperature which baked the North Shore course. On the opening nine he had a medal 31, five under par and a remarkable score considering that only one putt was conceded, and that of two feet. At the turn he was five up on the four-faced Canadian entry, and he ended the match by winning the 11th with a par four to Somerville's bogie five and halving the next two holes.

Billows, who won his morning match with John P. Burke, of Rye, N. Y., 2 and 1, has been a top-ranking amateur since 1935, when he drove to the Metropolitan Open at Lakeville, N. Y., in an old car and slept in the rear seat until tournament officials discovered his plight.

A former resident of Racine, Wis., he was a finalist against Johnny Goodman in the 1937 tournament.

Extra Hole Match
Schumacher, 23-year-old Texan, who has won the Eastern Amateur and trans-Mississippi titles, had to go an extra hole to defeat Harry Givan, of Seattle, Wash.

Givan took the seventeenth and eighteenth holes with great chip shots to square the match, but Schumacher won with a par 4 on the nineteenth, as Givan's first and second shots hit traps. In a morning match Schumacher defeated Eddie Meister, of Warrensville, Ohio, 3 and 2.

Ward, who almost won the National Open Championship this summer, disposed of Joseph Thompson, of Burlington, Ontario, in the morning.

Dutch Holds Browns To Six Hits, While Mates Collect 11

By Walter Haight

Given my annual chance to cover a big league ball game, I wobbled up to the press box hoping that Jow Blow, from Idaho, would clout one from home plate to North Beach with two out in the ninth to give the Nats a victory. I wanted a big important home run to send the Browns down to defeat. I was disappointed. Instead, the hit that Jow Blow hit, was a home run to North Beach with two out in the ninth to give the Nats a victory. I wanted a big important home run to send the Browns down to defeat. Galento, Nova Fight Tonight Before 30,000

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—There wasn't a handful of persons around this City of Brotherly Love tonight who thought the slugger get-together of Tony Galento and Lou Nova in Municipal Stadium tomorrow night would go the full 15 rounds.

Facts, Figures On Nova-Galento Bout Tonight

Philadelphia—Tony Galento, 34, vs. Lou Nova, 33, in 15 rounds. Galento, 5' 10", 165 lbs., 12 years in the ring. Nova, 5' 10", 165 lbs., 12 years in the ring. Galento, 12 years in the ring. Nova, 12 years in the ring. Galento, 12 years in the ring. Nova, 12 years in the ring.

See TENNIS, Page 35, Column 2.

With Shirley Povich

At Philadelphia this evening two generously upholstered young men will be fighting for the opportunity to get knocked out by Joe Louis some time next summer. Lou Nova and Tony Galento will be trying to win a fight which in the interest of their continued good health they should try to avoid winning.

There is no evidence that the Joe Louis camp is or should be alarmed whatever the outcome of tonight's engagement may be. When last seen in a ring with Louis, Galento was a helpless, protoplasmic mass of bleeding down-heavyweight. As for Nova, Gene Tunney described him with some bluntness a few months ago. Said Tunney: "Nova's simply a horrible fighter."

Since that time, Nova gathered some laurels for himself by knocking out Max Baer in 12 rounds but that fact hardly caused any concern in the Louis camp. You see Louis required only three rounds to knock out Baer three years ago when Baer was still in his prime and Louis merely on the way up to the championship. And it was not a technical knockout by Louis, but a full 10-count in contrast to the fact that Baer was still on his feet at the finish of the Nova affair.

It Won't Make Much Difference to Louis

Nova or Galento—it shouldn't make much difference to Louis who wins. Neither fellow is entitled to be mentioned in the same inhalation with the Brown Bomber as a fighting man. Galento is too short and too fat, and Nova is the sort of a guy who couldn't lick Joe Pastor and was dumped on the floor by a nonentity named Gunnar Barlund.

Louis was at the ring-side the night Nova licked Baer and if you happened to be looking Louis' way that evening you would have seen him grinning widely throughout the battle. He was watching the wild-punching Baer land a couple dozen right hands to Nova's chin and enjoying, too, Nova's willingness to take it. In his mind's eye that night, Joe Louis was probably anticipating the effects of a Joe Louis right, or even a Joe Louis left, to that same chin.

On the strength of that victory over Baer, the Nova people were actually offered a fight with Louis, but it is significant that they declined. Ray Carlen, Nova's manager, was frank enough. "We're not ready for Louis yet," said Carlen. "By next summer we will be, though, and then the championship is going to change hands."

Nova Won't Learn Much From Galento

We are rather vague as to how Nova hopes to show such sudden improvement. Certainly he will learn nothing from a fight with Tony Galento, a pugilistic freak who can't box a little bit. Galento's idea of the gentlemanly art of self-defense is cocking his left hand, taking a running jump, and letting fly. The only things Nova will learn from Galento is that he had best leave unlearned.

And the fact is that Nova will be taking considerable of a chance with his championship hopes when he steps into the ring with Galento. The Jersey fat man reached Louis with his left hand and put him on the floor, and there is no evidence that Nova is hard to hit. In fact, Nova's manner of fighting invites a blow on the chin. His willingness to take one in order to land one is commendable enough as a show-window for his courage, but against Galento it may not be brilliant strategy.

But Nova is logically the favorite to beat Galento this evening, nevertheless. And one can almost call his shot in prophesying the outcome. Some time during the middle of the bout, Galento will start bleeding like a Bourbon and the referee will stop the fight on that basis and award it to Nova by a technical kayo. At least that is the prospect. Galento's propensity for bleeding about the face is well known.

Tony Has One Path to Victory

Galento appears to have only one path to victory against Nova. He must catch up with Nova in the early rounds, knock him out before the Californian's jaws draw the Galento blood. That may be a waste time when the bell rings. Against Louis, it was Galento who threw the first hard punch.

Scar-tissue about the face and eyes—the effects of long campaigning in the ring—left Walker vulnerable to wound-opening jabs even as Galento invites the re-opening of old cuts. In fact, Walker's blood-letting actually changed the course of heavyweight title history on one occasion. That was the night when for six rounds he hammered the daylight out of Max Baer, only to stop the fight a bit later when he was masked by his own blood to the extent that the referee stopped it.

This week, Joe Jacobs appealed to the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission to instruct Referee George Blake to register no alarm if Galento's old wounds were reopened. Jacobs admitted that Galento bled easily, but that it would be unfair to stop the fight on that basis. He received no satisfaction from the commission and thus it is downright necessary for Galento to tag Nova with finality in the early rounds tonight.

Virginia Tech Accuses Navy of 'Grabbing' 1938 Frosh Star

Montgomery Lured Away, Says V. P. I.

Middies Also Tried To Persuade James, Sophomore Back, to Enter Prep School

Special Dispatch to The Post
Roanoke, Va., Sept. 14.—Navy today was accused by Virginia Tech of having "grabbed" Brud Montgomery, 16-pound freshman end on last year's team, from Keyser, W. Va., persuading the boy to leave the Gobbler institution this summer to attend Admiral Farragut Preparatory Academy before going to the Naval Academy in the fall of 1940.

In a published statement, W. L. (Monk) Younger, Tech athletic director, said that Montgomery had been approached by Rip Miller, Navy line coach, in correspondence this summer, and that the boy decided to leave Tech and attend Admiral Farragut one year before enrolling at Navy. The boy, Younger states, has been placed on the Naval Reserve list as assurance he will come to Navy if he fails to get a Congressional appointment.

Younger also said that Miller had approached Bill James, sophomore back, but that James had turned down the offer. Henry Reed, Gobbler head coach, said in reference to the Montgomery matter, "I'm glad they didn't succeed in getting James."

Younger stated that Tech planned to make a formal protest to the academy over the Montgomery incident. Under Southern Conference rules, Montgomery, in case he goes to Navy and makes the varsity team, will not be allowed to compete against members of the conference. Navy is in Southern Conference territory and the rules state that colleges in this area competing against members of the conference must do so under conference regulations, which prohibit playing transfer students in the sports in which they took part at the school of their former affiliation.

Navy 'Never Heard' Of Brud Montgomery

"Somebody's making a big howl about nothing," Capt. E. W. McKee, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, said last night when reached at Annapolis.

McKee disclaimed any knowledge of the "Montgomery incident." "I know nothing of any football player named Montgomery," he declared. He then added "but if Montgomery is planning to come here next year, that's his own affair."

"The Naval Academy has never grabbed players from any school. The whole thing is absurd. In the first place we cannot promise any boy an appointment for you know, as well as it is, that every boy who comes here must be appointed by a Senator or Representative."

Feminine Skippers to Compete With Men In President's Cup Regatta Tomorrow

Several of 150 Craft In Sailing Events to Be Handled by Women

Feminine skippers will contest the superiority of the male in sailboat racing when sailing enthusiasts from Connecticut to Florida open the thirteenth annual President's Cup Regatta tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. on the Potomac River off Hains Point.

Not only will women team with men in piloting various entries, but several of the 150 craft competing will be handled solely by women skippers.

Two Washington girls already have entered the Class B handicap. They are Nora O'Neill, of 214 Eighth street northwest, a newcomer to local sailing ranks, who will enter her Dencla, and Louise Kline, of the Columbia Yacht Club, who will pilot her sloop, Swan.

Sailing Schedule

Event	Tomorrow	Sunday
1 20-foot (round bottom) division	1:30	9:30
2 20-foot Class (Columbia)	1:35	9:35
3 20-foot Class (Columbia)	1:40	9:40

9 Handicap B	2:10	10:10
10 20-foot Class (Columbia)	2:15	10:15
11 20-foot Class (Columbia)	2:20	10:20
12 20-foot Class (Columbia)	2:25	10:25
13 Handicap C (one lap)	2:30	10:30
14 Handicap C (one lap)	2:35	10:35

Muriel Kilpatrick, of Barnegat Bay, N. J., also has entered the handicap, which had an entry list of 15 yesterday.

Three of the moth class fleet of Long Island Sound will be entered in the races. Arthur Clephane, sailing chairman, announced yesterday. The 11-footers, while not as speedy as the 20-footers, furnish an added attraction.

In the 20-foot class, Jack Zimmerman's Babes, current champion of the West River Sailing Club, of Galesville, Md., and Osborn Owings' Vanity, former titleholder at Galesville, will fight it out in the round bottom division.

A thirteenth class—a handicap for boats under 14 feet to be known as Class C—was added to the program yesterday. Jack Marsh, chairman of the race committee, announced. Both Capital and Corinthian Yacht clubs are holding open house to night and tomorrow night, and second and third races of the regatta will be Sunday morning and afternoon.

Brooklyn Scores Four Ways in First Grid League Tilt

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Scoring through four mediums the Brooklyn Dodgers ushered in their national professional football league season with a 12-to-7 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. A crowd of 19,444 watched the game.

The Dodgers registered a field goal in the first period, a touchdown and point after touchdown in the second, and a safety in the final quarter as the Pirates were scoring their lone touchdown and converting in the second quarter.

Vicious running attacks and sparkling aerial displays featured the battle.

York to Play Sunday

York Haberdashery's unlimited baseball team will meet Pepsi-Cola at Beltsville, Md., Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. York players are requested to meet at the concessions gate at Maryland University at 2 o'clock. Len Smith will pitch for the local line.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 14.—We ran into the Good Doctor, while combing Jacobs Beach last night—the Good Doctor being Jack Kearns. And the Good Doctor said, with some heat, that if Joe Louis doesn't knock out Bob Pastor in the first three or four rounds he is going to lose his heavyweight title.

"Can you imagine what the champ will look like along about the nineteenth round, if the thing goes that long?" Kearns demanded. He'll be so tired and winded that he'll want to use his bucket for a pillow. Louis is getting soft. He's leading the champion's life, eating the champion's food. It's happened to every champion who ever lived, and it's happened to Louis. Don't ever let anybody tell you he's the fighter he was, when he was hungry for that big sugar."

The Good Doctor might have been giving us a little steam. Steam is that inevitable form of CONSIDINE ballyhoo which precedes a big fight. There are a lot of steam guys, usually old fight men who hang around the promoter's office and tell the clear-eyed and ever-believing fight writers that the underdog has a great chance to win.

This is their way of making some gross over-match look even, and their way of getting a punched ticket from the grateful promoter. And enough underdogs win each year to make the old gaffers look more expert than the sportswriters, who are chronic suckers for form.

The Good Doctor hastened to advise us that his idea was no steam. "Pastor's not a great fighter, but he's a smart one," Kearns said. "He's smart enough not to try anything different from the technique he used in his first fight with Louis. Sure he's going to run, duck and sidestep. He'd be a champ not to. I think his worst times'll come early. I think they're going to send Louis out for this one like they did in the second Schmeling fight—you know, kill 'em off quick."

That's the way I used to send Dempsey out—trained for maybe three or four rounds at top speed. They use Louis the same way, but unless he tags Pastor early, the thing'll go 20 rounds—with Pastor getting better and Louis getting worse all the way."

One of the most curious and enervating callings in sport is that of ball boy at the big tennis tournaments. The cream of the trade is performing daily at Forest Hill these days, racing madly back and forth across the court, scooping up vagrant tennis balls and returning them to the players, on the first bounce. That's the cardinal rule of the ball boy business. Never throw a ball to a player on the fly. First bounce, or you get bounced.

At Forest Hill the boys are paid 75 cents a match. The recognized limit of ball boys is 10 sets, by which time their backbones are creaking and their legs are dead. A ball boy begins to crack up when he's about 12. After that he retires. Only one, Charley Mattson, ever learned to play well enough to get into the Nationals.

Mattson and one Billy Galbraith are the Babe Ruth and Ty Cobb of ball boys.

Mattson was the first person in the world to hear the stunning news that Helen Moody was going to default to Helen Jacobs. Handed her three new balls, at that point in the third set, and she coldly said, "I'm not going on." Then she went over and told the startled umpire.

Galbraith is revered by latter day ball boys because he seemed to be bred for the business. "He had wonderful short legs, and long arms," one of them told us today. "He was built like an ape. That's the perfect build, because you don't have to bend over so far, to scoop up a ball."

Anacostia, Central Hold Scrimmage

Pearce Uses 36 Players in Season's First 'Rough Stuff'

Coch Hardy Pearce used all but four of his 40-odd candidates yesterday as the Central High School football team engaged in Anacostia High in its first scrimmage of the season on the home field. The teams will meet again Monday morning at Central.

The scrimmage yesterday lasted an hour and a half and both teams showed up well in the early going although later the ball handling was sloppy on both sides. Blocking also showed need of considerable improvement.

Bredbenner, Porter and Martin were a speedy trio of ball carriers for Central and Steiner, dropping-kicking ace, demonstrated he has lost none of his skill.

WHERE ELSE BUT HAVANA itself would smokers know best the true flavor of Havana tobacco? That's why we took the new Blended-with-Havana White Owl straight to Cuba to test it. We selected prominent Cubans—real connoisseurs of cigars—gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception they all praised the rich Havana flavor of this new cigar.

Yes—and we're certainly proud of the Havana tobacco that goes into this new cigar. It's a choice grade of Havana. Maybe that sounds unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar? Well, we're America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco and we know what we're talking about. Fact is, this Havana tobacco is the same type used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this Havana in each new White Owl, too. If you'd like to get a 5¢ cigar that has a 10¢ flavor—ask for a new White Owl today.

Rank Tony Galento Second If He Beats Nova Tonight

Title Bout Limited to Top Ratings

Marty Gallagher Given Honorable Mention; Other D. C. Boxers Drop

Tony Galento again is in position to become the Nation's No. 1 "logical contender" for the world's heavyweight boxing crown held by Joe Louis, the National Boxing Association's quarterly ratings—bringing to light a number of astounding situations—disclosed yesterday.

All Tony has to do to achieve the coveted spot is to dispose of Lou Nova tonight when they meet in Philadelphia. He will then be called the best fighter in the country—next to Louis—and Nova will be No. 3.

Sandwiched in between these two is Bob Pastor, ruled the second best boxer no matter how you slice it, but who will fight Louis September 20 in Detroit for the championship.

First Three Eligible

After designating the Nation's best fighters in the eight major weight classifications, the N. B. A. specified that "the first three boxers in every class are to be recognized as the only logical contenders to be recognized for title matches with champions in their respective classes."

This would seem to leave the pending Joey Archibald-Harry Jeffra featherweight title match scheduled for Griffith Stadium in a muddle. Jeffra, rated No. 6, is three notches away from being good enough to meet Champion Archibald, according to the N. B. A. version.

Nevertheless, Archibald's managers were notified yesterday that he must defend his title here no later than October 2. The N. B. A. was to take a special commission from the fight, postponed because of Archibald's cut eye.

But about the heavyweight situation—the N. B. A.'s biggest surprise package and boost for boxing's older generation is unveiled in the form of "honorable mention" for that battled, scarred warrior of Foggy Bottom, Marty Gallagher.

Gallagher Ranked

Marty, with one fight in the three months since the last N. B. A. rating list, enters the charmed circle populated by such stellar oldsters as Gunnar Barlund and Jack Roper. Two other Washington fighters maintained their ratings in the "first ten," but the distinction is doubtful for each held much higher positions in the spring ratings.

Steve Mammos, No. 5 three months ago, is No. 9 in the welterweight division, while George Abrams, No. 5 in the middleweight division three months ago, now is No. 10.

Berwanger Runs Again—But Not Far in Rugby Practice

Russo Victor In Featured Midget Race

The midgets went around and around last night at the Capital Speedway, but everything came out all right—at least, it did for Paul Russo, of Chicago, who piloted his powerful little Offenhauser jittersbug to victory in the six-mile feature race in 8 minutes, 13.64 seconds.

More than 3,000 persons sat shivering from the early fall chill which hung over the flats at New York avenue and Bladensroad road northeast while 20 daredevil pilots fought for top purses that ranged from $15 to $135.

Ghecas Looms as Hoya Backfield Ace; Fred Widener Returns to Terp Squad

By Jack Munhall.

The loss through injury of its triple-threat halfback, Joe Mellendick, unquestionably was a serious jolt to Georgetown's hopes for a second successive undefeated football season, but paradoxically the absence of that brilliant star may result in a much improved backfield for Jack Hagerty's Hoyas.

Hubbard, giant American League umpire and a former professional football star, paid Hagerty a visit in the morning and was obviously impressed with the fine condition of the G. U. squad. Shortly after Hubbard's departure, Gallagher, the St. Louis Browns' promising rookie outfielder and a football rival of Georgetown when he played with Manhattan, put in his appearance. Like Hubbard, he predicted a great season for G. U.

Widener Returns
Maryland University's eleven, beset sorely by an injury epidemic markedly reminiscent of the misfortune that attended it all last season, received re-enforcement yesterday as Fred (Punch) Widener, who previously had announced his withdrawal from school, joined the squad.

A junior and resident of Baltimore, Widener is a valuable blocking back and also a defense mainstay of the Maryland lacrosse ten. The Maryland squad stuck to a slower pace yesterday, putting off the rough work until its many injured players are recovered, with Coach Frank Dobson stressing attack and blocking.

In its most belated start in history the Georgetown University football squad will hold its first fall practice this afternoon at 3:45 on the Polo Field.

Head Coach Bill Reinhardt expects the vanguard of an expected squad of 38, about 30 in number, to report for the initial drill.

Fourteen Lettermen Back
With 14 returning lettermen and a group of especially promising sophomores Reinhardt looks forward to a successful and perhaps even a great season. Strong at ends and tackles and in the backfield, Reinhardt's chief problems will be in developing guards and sufficient reserve strength.

Starting Saturday the Colonials will be on a two-day practice basis until after the opening of the school term. Their first game is not until October 7, when Davis and Elkins will be met at Griffith Stadium.

Nanjo's Cobra Clutch Stops Another Dusek

Gent With Neck Hold Subdues Rudy In 25 Minutes

Nanjo Singh applied two of his lethal Cobra Clutches to the beefy neck of a protesting Rudy Dusek last night to win the feature of the weekly wrestling program before 1,100 spectators at Griffith Stadium.

After 20 minutes of fairly even grappling Singh secured his favorite hold and kept it fully three minutes before Dusek got loose by squirming outside the ropes. Groggy, Dusek was then an easy mark and Singh repeated the grip to complete his victory in the time of 25 minutes.

Bob Wagner and Gene Vaggonne wrestled to a 30-minute draw in a crowd-pleasing semifinal. The boys probably will be rematched next week.

In preliminaries Jack Hader pinned Bad Boy Brown in 15 minutes with a crab hold; Alan Eustace and Tommy Rae worked a 30-minute draw, and Stanley Pinto, subbing for the injured Abe Coleman threw Gene Ologuidal in 14 minutes with a leg stretch.

Episcopal Grid Call Brings 39

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., September 14.—Thirty-nine candidates have reported for pre-school football practice at Episcopal High School, under the direction of W. B. "Billy" Ravenel, newly-appointed head coach. Drills will be held twice a day until next Tuesday.

With Ravenel taking over the coaching reins as the successor to W. B. Cardwell, other members of the Maroons' coaching staff include George Worthington and Al Seaman, both former Virginia Tech gridmen, who will tutor the linemen and ends, respectively. Ravenel will coach the backfield.

Eight lettermen are on hand to comprise the nucleus for the 1939 squad. They are Marshall Steves, end; John Izard, tackle; Pinckney Wroth, guard; Randolph Cary, center, and Bradford, Craighill, Couch and Powe, backs.

Indian Spring, Capital Teams Meet Sunday

Congressional Club Plays Rodgers Forge; Chevy Chase Host

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Indian Spring, a heavy favorite to win the Maryland State Golf Association team championship in the annual fall series starting Sunday, draws one of the toughest assignments of the first round, Tony Sylvester's Capital Clubmen, over the latter course.

The Capital team, captained by George Molloy, were the near-upsetters of Congressional's 1937 and '38 champions last year, losing only 9 1/2 to 8 1/2.

Arthur Urban's Indian Spring team, that includes one of the fastest amateur line-ups ever to play for one club in this section, will be favored over the Glen Echo team, but the score should hinge on the last match, and a Capital victory is not out of the question.

Congressional, presenting a weaker team that won the title for the past two years, will journey to Rodgers Forge, where, after Johnny Flattery and Otto Grainer, they should have much trouble in running up another victory.

Other matches in the upper bracket will find Argyle playing the role of host for the first time, entertaining Charlie Betscher and his Hillendale linksmen. Spencer Overton, Erford Barnes, and Co. from Rolling Road, will visit Chevy Chase in what looms as one of the closest matches of the day, while Al Treder and Harry Pitt will play Andy Gibson and partner in the feature of the Manor-Bonnie View match at the Baltimore semipublic club.

In the only other all-local match, Kenwood will visit Beaver Dam in a match that looks about even on paper, with the edge, if any, to the hosts. Suburban will play at Woodholme in an all-Baltimore match, while Baltimore Country Club draws a bye and will meet the winner of the Indian Spring Capital match in the second round September 24.

Buck Newsom Gives Yankees Third Straight Beating, 6-1

Ex-Nat Blanks Champs for 8 Innings

Tigers Rout Donald, Score All Their Runs in Second And Third Innings

New York, Sept. 14.—Big Buck Newsom, the Detroit firebrand, handed the World Champion Yankees their third consecutive defeat, 6-1, today with a six-hit pitching performance that had them shut out for eight innings.

Even so, New York crowded a bit closer the formal clinching of its fourth straight American League pennant, because the Boston Red Sox also lost. The Yanks now need only to win three games or Boston to lose three.

Led by Ralph Kress, the Tigers tore into Rookie Alton Donald for all their runs in the second and third innings. They got two in the second stanza when Frank Crosetti muffed Pete Fox's easy grounder. Kress singled and Joe Di Maggio let the ball through him, and Birdie Tebbets singled.

In the third two walks and a single filled the bases. Fox singled one run home and, with the bases still jammed, Kress hit the first of two doubles to clear them.

Oral Hildebrand was unapproachable in his relief effort, scattering four hits and striking out seven in 5-2-3 innings, but his teammates never had a chance against Newsom.

It was the seventeenth victory against ten defeats for Newsom and Donald's third loss opposite 13 triumphs. It was Detroit which broke the New York rookie's string of 12 wins last month.

Travis Finds His Double Lacks in Elasticity

Leonard Wins 18th Victory For Nats, 5-1

When the pitch came, Wright gave it one of those relaxed, pull-back pushes in his best sacrifice style. This time, Wright hustled toward first base while West dug out for third. Third baseman Clift came rushing in and just as it appeared that he might scoop up the ball and fire it to first for the out, he stopped and took his hands out of the way. Clift was not carrying an umbrella, but he staged a Munich with the ball.

Slowly it rolled along the diamond side of the chalk line which, thanks to the groundkeeper, was especially thick yesterday. Clift stalked the ball as if he were Sister Cat trailing Kid Mouse. Catcher Harshany and Umpire Rommel joined Clift in following the ball along the line. The horsehide finally slowed to snail pace and then came to a rocking stop, but still inside the line. It was a hit for Wright who now occupied second base with West perched on third.

It was sort of coincidence, inasmuch as I follow the horses, that the Browns should be using a pitcher named Trotter. This Trotter had been doing all right up to this point, but things followed that slow drag hit down third.

Travis slammed what might have been a perfect double-play grounder had not West and Wright moved up a base. Clift grabbed the ball and threw to catcher Harshany and West, who trapped between third and home. Harshany tried to run West back to the bag and threw to Clift. This time the Browns' third baseman wanted to catch the ball and didn't. He muffed the throw, recovered and then fired at Trotter who was covering the plate, but West slid under the pitcher and the score was tied. Wright scored later in the inning while Heffner threw Aderholt out at first.

The Browns made their lone run in the first inning. Leonard pitched up his knuckle ball so slow that it seemed to say, "I dare you to hit me, big boy." Two of the Browns succeeded. Heffner walked to start the frame. Sullivan forced him at second. McQuinn singled to right, sending Sullivan to third from where he counted on Clift's single to left.

Leonard allowed six hits, not more than two in any inning, and fanned four men. However, the chief fanning of the afternoon was by Wels. He struck out in his first four trips to the plate. Up for the fifth time, he had two strikes on him when he fled to Shortstop Christian. Thus Wels came within one strike of equaling the league record of five "hit nothings."

With Aderholt at second, the Nats presented an infield that stopped 6 feet, 2 inches. The combination, which included Vernon, Travis and Lewis performed in faultless fashion and accounted for eight of the Nats' 11 hits. But to tell the truth, the game for standing of the teams purposes, was as newsworthy as (1) cow chewing her cud (2) locomotive on track (3) dog wagging its tail (4) traffic light at busy corner.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

Dutch Leonard, Buddy Lewis, Mickey Vernon and Rookie Morris Aderholt were the biggest guns yesterday as the Nats turned back the Browns and take the points distributed in the Man of the Month contest.

To Leonard, five points, because he held the Browns to six hits, blanked them after the first inning and rang up his eighteenth victory of the season.

To Lewis, two points, because he pounded out two singles and a double and scored a run in addition to fletching in excellent style.

To Vernon, two points, for his pair of hard-hit doubles, one that drove in two runs.

To Aderholt, one point, for making a sizzling single, driving in two runs and fletching faultlessly.

Izaak Walton League Meets This Week-End

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 14.—The local chapter of the Izaak Walton League will be host to the State Association when the latter holds its annual meeting here Saturday and Sunday. The session will get underway at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at the Monticello Hotel.

A feature of the two-day program will be a picnic Saturday afternoon at the White Hall Lake site, now under construction in the western end of the country as a recreation center for residents of the city and country. The picnic is scheduled for 4:30 o'clock and the program will include contests in fly casting, pistol, and trap shooting. Prizes will be awarded winners in each division.

Miles' Homer in Tenth Beats Chicago for Athletics, 4 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—Dee Miles' tenth-inning home run with one on base and gilt-edged pitching by Nelson Potter gave Philadelphia's Athletics a 4-to-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the opener of their series today.

Potter held the Sox to three hits, one a home run with one on base by Hank Steinbacher in the first inning, and started the winning spurt in the tenth by doubling to right field. With one out Miles batted for Newsome and lifted the ball over the right field wall, scoring Eddie Collins, Jr., who ran for Potter, ahead of him.

Bob Johnson scored the Athletics' second run on a double steal with Frank Hayes in the sixth.

Freight Traffic Creeps Up to Level of 1937

Week's Loadings 17.4
Per Cent Above the Same Week in 1938

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended September 9 totaled 17.4 million cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 86,700 cars or 17.4 per cent above the corresponding week in 1938, but a decrease of 40,783 cars or 5.8 per cent below the same week in 1937. Loading of revenue freight for the week of September 9, which included Labor Day holiday, was a decrease of 54,339 cars or 7.8 per cent below the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 266,819 cars, a decrease of 17,314 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 34,051 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Loading of merchandise less than railroad lot freight totaled 135,770 cars, a decrease of 21,093 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,778 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Coal loading amounted to 124,600 cars, a decrease of 8,035 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 5,890 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Livestock loading amounted to 16,650 cars, an increase of 2,633 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 1,983 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Forest products loading totaled 30,031 cars, a decrease of 3,329 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 3,394 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

One loading amounted to 49,478 cars, a decrease of 3,015 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 24,484 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

Coke loading amounted to 7,792 cars, an increase of 314 cars above the preceding week, and an increase of 2,842 cars above the corresponding week in 1938.

All districts reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1938. All but one reported decreases compared with the corresponding week in 1937 except the Eastern and Pocahontas.

Washington Bank Women Hold Annual Dinner

About 200 Washington bank women attended the annual dinner of the Women's Committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Bankers, last evening at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Earlene White, postmistress of the United States Senate and past president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, was the guest speaker.

Margaret A. Fischer, Women's Committee chairman, presided.

Other speakers included Ord Preston, president of the Bankers' Association; Francis E. Robey, president Washington Chapter; Raymond B. Dickey, dean of the faculty, and Edward M. Blacklock, educational chairman, Mrs. Helen Sharpe, Bank of Commerce & Savings, rendered a vocal number.

Wheat—Sept. 14 (F)—A general increase of 2¢ per ton in the price of wheat in Chicago today, the Chicago Board of Trade reported. The cost of foundry iron jumped to $23 a ton in the Pittsburgh district. At Alabama manufacturing plants to $19 a ton will be effective next week.

A spokesman for the Pittsburgh board said the reason for the rise in price was that "people suddenly decided their inventories are too low and want them increased."

Brokers' Loans Drop $69,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's deposits held by member banks in New York totaled $430,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $69,000,000 compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $585,000,000.

British Expected To Send Buying Board to Canada

New York, Sept. 14 (F)—Authoritative banking sources here with English connections said today that it was understood that the British government will shortly send a British war supplies purchasing commission to Canada.

The commission, it was reported, would establish headquarters in Canada. Subsequently, perhaps depending on domestic political developments, it might establish branch offices in New York and Washington. All the members of the commission will be British subjects, it was said.

Later a similar commission might be sent to Canada by the French government.

In the World War, J. P. Morgan & Co., acted as purchasing agent of American-made war supplies for both the British and French governments from early in 1915 until the end of the war. Orders exceeding a total of $3,000,000,000 cleared through the Morgan banking house.

Subsequently Morgan partners were questioned by Congressional committee members about their wartime activities.

The Morgan firm, it was said, does not expect to act in a similar capacity in this war. It has not been asked to do so, and has not solicited such an appointment, it was said.

Noted Chicago Hotel Bid In by the RFC

Chicago, Sept. 14 (F)—Look, stock and barrel, the Congress Hotel was sold today for $1,335,000. The world-famous hotel, stopping place of nine American presidents, was offered at public auction to satisfy a $1,400,000 judgment obtained by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's mortgage company.

It was bid in by the Congress Hotel and Annex, Inc., an organization formed several days ago for that purpose. Frank M. Murchison, manager of the Chicago loan office of the RFC, said that the RFC Mortgage Co. owned all the stock of the corporation.

Room No. 1502, the Presidential suite, was occupied at various times by Presidents Grant, McKinley, Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Pig Iron Prices Raised $2 a Ton

Pittsburgh, Sept. 14 (F)—A general increase of $2 per ton in the price of pig iron in Chicago today, the Pittsburgh Board of Trade reported. The cost of foundry iron jumped to $23 a ton in the Pittsburgh district. At Alabama manufacturing plants to $19 a ton will be effective next week.

Buyers Lift Wheat Against Profit Reapers

But Selling Wipes Out Half of 3 Cents A Bushel Advance

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Buyers swarmed into the wheat pit again today, bidding prices up 3 1/2 to 3 cents a bushel before enough profit taking was attracted to wipe out about half of the gains.

At the day's highs of 88 1/2 for December and 89 1/2 for May, wheat sold within less than a cent of the war-broom peaks established last Thursday, which stand as the highest levels reached here in 18 months.

Statements of Government officials indicating that an advance in farm commodity prices is wanted and reports of improved milling and flour demand were factors in the trade. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace supplemented yesterday's statement by President Roosevelt concerning wheat prices by adding that an orderly advance of farm prices to parity levels would be viewed with satisfaction, provided it was due to real consumptive demand. Wallace also disclosed that Great Britain and France were reported to have inquired about supplies of agricultural products, although no requests have been directed to any Government agency.

Wheat closed at 87 1/2 cents higher than yesterday, December, 87 1/2; May, 88 1/2; corn 1/2¢ higher; December, 77 1/2; May, 78 1/2; oats 1/2¢ higher and 1/2¢ lower to 1/2¢ higher.

Two New York Exchange Firms Announce Merger

A joint announcement was made yesterday by the New York Stock Exchange firms of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co. and Clark, Williams & Co. of their merger, effective today. The merged firm will carry the name of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co., which will continue its branch office here.

Clark Williams will become a special partner. Frederick H. Clark, son, Francis J. Ridgeway and Frank R. Schumann will become general partners, and all of the partners of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co. will continue as partners in the merged firm.

The enlarged firm will continue its membership in the New York Stock Exchange, New York Curb Exchange, Chicago Board of Trade, Chicago Stock Exchange, Commodities Exchange, Inc., Winnipeg Grain Exchange, New York Cotton Exchange and New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

The firm of Winthrop, Mitchell & Co. has been in existence since 1899, and with its predecessor firms dates back to 1908. The firm of Clark Williams & Co. was organized in 1919 and became a member of the New York Stock Exchange in 1926.

Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier of the Bank of Commerce and Savings, announced yesterday that the board of directors had declared a regular quarterly dividend of 3¢ per cent on its stock payable on October 2 to stockholders of record September 20.

Directors of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank yesterday declared a dividend of 4 per cent payable September 30 to stockholders of record on September 25.

Allies Seek Beef From Argentina

Buenos Aires, Sept. 14 (F)—The National Meat Board had under consideration today negotiations with England and France to buy 200,000 tons of beef above the regular export quotas from Argentina.

Guayana and Brazil. Daily sessions have been held with packing company executives. England, it was reported, wants 170,000 tons and France the balance.

The meat board was said to be asking about 13 cents a kilogram (equivalent to $5.90 100 pounds). The order was estimated to represent 600,000 steers. Packing executives said Argentina alone probably could supply 250,000 tons by the end of this year.

The Market

Substantial Buying Offsets Realizing Prices Move Within a Narrow Range

New York, Sept. 14.—The stock market moved within an average range of less than one and a quarter points today for the first time since the lid was blown off Wall Street by the war. Trading also subsided, only 2,007,510 shares changing hands, which also is a record low since hostilities started.

Other markets likewise took on a more orderly appearance, with the single exception of the foreign exchange market where sterling, without the official support of the British government, slumped to a new low for the low of $3.76. It recovered later to close at $3.92, but its close the previous day had been $4.00. Today's close was the lowest quotation for the British currency since the post-war slump when it went to $3.18.

Listed bond trading returned today to an ordinary basis, save for a few wide fluctuations in foreign issues. Turnover was only a little over $10,000,000, and only a normal volume was done in Treasury bonds, which showed a good tone.

Commodities
Among commodities, both wheat and cotton started with good forward movements but had their gains cut down. Wheat was up 3 1/2 to 3 cents a bushel at one time, but profit-taking operations cut the net advance to 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 cents. Cotton jumped 15 to 21 points, aided by short covering, but suffering somewhat in the final hour on hedge selling.

Other staples held much nearer their previous closing levels than for any day since the beginning of the war. There was a runner-up of $1 to 54 points in wool futures, but other fluctuations were moderate. Rubber futures, for instance, advanced 15 points up to 10 points lower. Sugar was 8 up to 10 down.

The best news business has heard in the last few days came when United States Steel reaffirmed prices for the fourth quarter for delivery and consumption in the United States. It is assumed other steel companies will follow.

A major difficulty faced by all companies occupied in the so-called heavy industries has been their inability to determine what they may have to pay for steel before they are able to complete contracts entered into. The same applies to all others in the heavy industries but now there will be more assurance. The result should be helpful to business.

The break in sterling developed when the British authorities suddenly permitted it to fall out of the $4.02-$4.08 range which has prevailed for several days.

Where the Bank of England had been willing to buy all sterling offered at $4.02 and sell sterling at $4.08, the authorities today began discriminating against certain offerings. They let it be known to the market that the $4.02 rate would still obtain in the case of liquidation of American-owned prewar sterling balances and in the case of current trade transactions with the British Empire. For other types of sterling offerings, the peg was removed.

The result was that a split rate, similar to that existing in the market for certain types of American currencies, began to prevail in the market for sterling. The so-called free rate for sterling broke to a new low at $3.77, off 2 1/2 cents from yesterday's closing, and then rallied to a closing level of $3.92. The wide fluctuations in sterling caused uneasiness in French markets, which fell to a new low at $2.15, and then closed at $2.23 for a net loss of 6 points.

In the Federal Reserve statistics for this week, released today by reserve board, the measure of the current support of the Government bond market was shown to have increased $229,505,000 net in the week ended September 12, extending to $397,520,000. In the last two weeks and to $400,978,000 the rise in the last three weeks. Never before in the system's history have the reserve banks bought Government issues at that rate.

Trading in stocks was featured today by strength in the railroad equipment issues. Steels and building shares continued active, the most active stock of the day being United States Steel, of the morning.

In the foreign bond section the main tendency again was downward. Domestic corporation issues were mixed and fairly active.

Treasury issues edge higher
United States Treasury issues moved higher by small fractions in the formal market, and counter sales were of similar character.

guaranteed issues advanced, in counter trading a brisk business was done, especially in short bonds and

Bank Clearings At Top Point Since January

Week's Total for 22 Cities Is 18.5 Per Cent Over Year Ago

New York, Sept. 14.—A sharp upswing in bank clearings this week over the preceding holiday period brought the current total to the highest level since the opening week of this year. The margin of increase over last year was the widest since the week of February 8, 1939, and extended the series of year-to-year gains to eight successive weeks.

Total transactions for 22 leading cities for the week ended September 13, according to Dunn & Bradstreet, were $5,119,562,000, as compared with $5,164,437,000 for the same 1938 week, or an increase of 18.5 per cent.

Clearings this week exceeded those of the preceding short week by $1,713,622,000, as compared with a rise of $1,005,832,000 between the two similar weeks of last year.

Business for the greater part of the day was narrow. Foreign arbitrage operations were curtailed by erratic fluctuations in sterling.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Today's Radio Highlights

By Florence Osborn.

"Bridge players often try for a pot-shot, only to find themselves holding the bag," says the brilliant young Alfred P. Sheinwald, bridge analyst extraordinaire, in an article written for "Bridge World."

"The most common case of the 'pot shot,'" he says, "is the 'light' double."

"But it's foolish to make a light double unless your partnership's defense is better than fair."

Here's the sort of thing that happens:

"West opened the queen of spades and continued the suit on seeing his partner's encouraging eight. South ruffed and took stock for a minute or so."

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter 24

I COULD SEE the point of the safety belts, too. Adriana had already clipped herself down on the seat to the right of the companionway. I took the other. The belt was a comfortably stout band of webbing at least 4 inches wide, which I felt sure would hold me in place whatever we struck. It fastened with a steel flap-and-ring—strong and secure, yet easily opened if we had to jump for the exit in a hurry after a crash.

Once settled, I had my first chance to take in the cabin of this super-vessel. It was not more than 13 feet wide or long, and it was packed with intricate instruments, mostly electrical. I could see that the Mark X was an ultimate expression of the age of motors, just as the Adriana was an ultimate expression of the age of sail. The helmsman sat forward amidships, in a sort of booth that sheltered him from the low lights on either side. He faced a windshield in which a whirling glass disk remained always clear of spray, and an instrument panel as elaborate as one of the pair on a transport airplane. Out of an urgent personal interest, I tried to find and read a speedometer among the worm-glowing dials, but it was too far away, or else hidden behind the bulk of Big Jack, or by the gyrocompass.

Mr. Raskin, on the starboard side facing forward, was evidently in the navigating position. His radio set suggested a direction finder. His chair was on a swivel, made to spin around 180 degrees to the chart table. The "count's" chair, on the port side, also evidently turned, but to a table on which there was only the remains of a picnic supper.

The places in which Adriana and I sat were fastened facing immovably toward the bow. They were not individual chairs like the others, but the inner ends of two narrow couches fixed athwartships against the after wall. Adriana's couch ran in under the chart table (or whatever it was) behind the "count." Our positions were separated only by the narrow companionway leading to the afterdeck, and the girl's left hand could easily reach my right. It certainly didn't make my wrist feel any worse to have her hand in mine.

We found we could talk if we leaned our heads together. Even though we had to shout in the infernal din of our passage through the night, our conversation was as private as if we'd been alone in the middle of the Atlantic. But the effort to save breath and make ourselves clear led to talk which wasted no words.

"Is the MacGlashan all right?" said the girl.

"What? Oh, yes. He saved my life. We had to kill two police dogs."

"I know."

"How?"

"He told me there were two dogs. You whistled when he was lying off the beach, getting ready to start in this boat. He heard the splash as the MacGlashan hit the water, and came over to investigate, and found me."

"He didn't hurt you, did he?"

"No. He was nice as pie—most of the time. He wanted me to go along of my free choice to help him. He wanted me to use my special knowledge of these waters to show the other man that the crew of a boat like this could operate on the New England coast at night even without radio."

"Wouldn't they surely have radio sets?"

"I should think so. I can see that he's trying to demonstrate something besides just this boat. I don't know what."

"Tell me what happened."

"When this boat appeared out of the fog and that man saw who was on your yawl, he asked me to go with them. I said I wouldn't at the top of my lungs."

"I know."

"Did you hear me? I hoped you would. Why didn't you come then?"

"I didn't hear you. It was Zeus—the artist."

"Is he mixed up in this?"

"Yes, he's a naval secret service man, or something, spying on our friend Mr. Raskin. I guess I was too busy with those dogs. I don't know why I didn't hear you."

"Well, he pushed me down into the cabin and argued with me, trying to pretend we were friends. It was quite horrid. He smells so. While we were talking we heard dogs fighting on the shore. He realized it was you at once, but never guessed the MacGlashan might be in it, too. He evidently thought you were being killed, and didn't mind it a bit. I could hear the MacGlashan's voice, and knew you would be all right."

"It was pretty close."

"Oh, I never worried about you—well, when everything was quiet, Mr. Raskin told me to come along. He said we would run to Newport, Browns Ledge, and Point Jude, and then he'd bring me back all safe and sound to Menemsha. I knew there was no use resisting, but I stalled while I scratched the initials of our course behind my back on the steps. You found them?"

"Yes, I did. But we thought it was B. I—Block Island, not B. L. I. I understand now how it happened we bumped into you where we did."

"Also, when we came on deck I blew the whistle so that you'd know from the MacGlashan's actions that I needed him, and you. Mr. Raskin snatched it from me, asking me who I thought could hear that now—you being dead or badly hurt, I suppose he meant, as well as the whistle making such a silly squeak anyway. Then he hustled me on board this boat."

"And away you went."

"Yes, it really scared me to death. I'd never been so fast on water before, to say nothing of not being able to see a mortal thing ahead. I think we're not going at the rate we were then, or else we're hitting the seas differently."

"The signal is at full speed, whatever they may be doing with the throttle," I said. "We're going enough for me." Our passage felt more like rough flying than boating. There was none of the thump-thump of waves slapping the bow; we must have been simply skimming the tops. The impacts all ran together into the vibration of the motors, which was terrific. The windshield in front of the helmsman was as unbrokenly black as a piece of hard coal.

"That radio echo device the 'count' is working seems to do pretty well," the girl suggested.

"It didn't stop your colliding with the Freda K."

"Were you and Captain Matt coming after me? The Freda K must have changed her course at the last minute. We knew there was another boat ahead and just where it was and knew the two courses would clear each other. We were stopping to take soundings when we struck you, and the 'count' had taken off his headphones."

"They made you sound, then?"

"Yes. Mr. Raskin would sound for me, and bring up samples of the bottom. I'd tell them where I thought we were, and then they'd go in and check me with the radio and submarine bell signals, and that echo depth finder over there, and then Mr. Raskin would say, 'You see' to the count and he would pretend to be impressed. I was lucky and hit it pretty close each time."

"I don't see what your part in the trip was intended to prove."

"Neither do I. But I tell you he's trying to do something more than sell the boat."

"Did you fire any torpedoes?"

"Zeus and I heard a couple of explosions."

"No. Mr. Raskin told the count that of course there was no use firing any of the four torpedoes in the tubes forward—"

"Are we sitting on four real torpedoes?"

"I think they're dummies. But there are six real depth bombs for use against submarines in the after part of the boat. Or rather, there were six. We fired two—fireworks to impress the count, I guess. That's what you must have heard. The explosions were deep under water, but very heavy. In spite of the speed, we were making away from where we'd dropped them, they shook this boat from stem to stern. Mr. Raskin said there were 400 pounds of T. N. T. in each."

"And there are four more of those left on board right behind our backs?"

"That's nearly a ton of high explosive."

"Maybe the others are dummies."

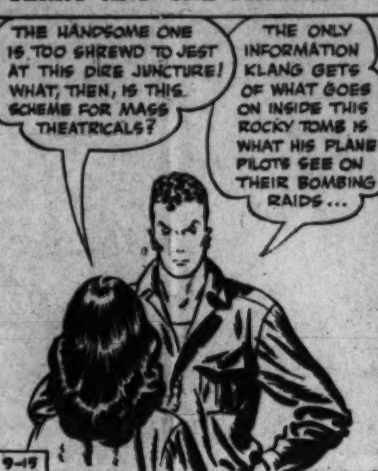

"I'd hate to count on it if we hit anything," said I, and we stopped talking for a while.

The devil's engine in which the girl and I were reluctant passengers boomed onward toward its fog-hidden destination. At the pace we were going we must be nearly at Newport.

"Listen, lady," I said, leaning back to Adriana's ear. "You and I are in a Grade-B jam right now, and if it weren't for having with us this man whom our friend of the Sea Reduction is trying to impress, we'd be in a Grade-A jam. There's one thing sure, we've got to leave this craft when the 'count' does. You be ready to move fast when I give you the signal. I think our lives will be worth minus nothing if we stay on board after he's gone. We know too much. We're the two people most in Mr. Raskin's way. So stand by, and jump when I do."

"All right."

SAVE THE PRICE OF A 'SECOND SUIT' Not Magic Just Simple Arithmetic

EXTRA TROUSERS: In the first place that extra pair of trousers gives you an extra 3/5 wear of another suit. That's not guesswork. It's an admitted fact. Since you pay $35 for the suit to begin with, 3/5 of that means a dividend of $21.

FEWER PRESSINGS: Next, the suit is made of a specially selected worsted that is woven in a "Cable Twist." This twist makes the suit hold its shape longer and need fewer pressings. In two years of wear you save about $7 a year on tailor bills or a total of $14.

The Wearlong Worsted Two = Trouser Suit

By the House of Worsted-tex in the famous
British Lounge and conventional models

WITHOUT the benefit of calculus and logarithms, it's quite evident that by adding the $21 and $14, as mentioned above, you already have $35 on the plus side . . . and that pays for another suit.

IS it any wonder that you get the wear of 2 suits? Is it any wonder that after a year, when a normal suit is on the wane, this Wearlong Worsted Two-Trouser Suit just gets its "second wind" and breezes right on through its second year? Is it any wonder? Frankly, at $35, it is! We used to sell this same suit at $35 with only one pair of trousers. Now, for the first time, $35 with 2 Pairs of Trousers.

COME in today! Ask to see this suit by the House of Worsted-tex in either the British Lounge or Conventional models.
